US EMBASSY BLAST | Court observes that Aids condition confines one to a lifetime on treatment

Survivor gets Sh652m for HIV infection

He contracted virus while rescuing people buried in rubble

BY MUCHEMI WACHIRA

@wachiramuchemi
mwachira@ke.nationmedia.com

A survivor of 1998 bomb blast will get Sh652.5 million ($7.5 million) as damages after he contracted HIV while trying to rescue victims of the terrorists attack.

William Maina was digging through the rubble of the US Embassy, that had been blown apart by the terrorist bomb.

He testified before a US court that he was working off-site at the Embassy during the blast and rushed to the site of the bombing to help with the rescue.

It is while helping the victims that he suffered cuts and scratches that exposed him to blood from one of them.

Mr Maina was later diagnosed with the HIV virus that causes Aids. He provided evidence before court proving that he did not contract the disease elsewhere.

Sh435m

The amount awarded to each victim who suffered severe physical injuries, such as fractures or soft-tissue wounds

"Although he otherwise suffered only minor physical injuries during the recovery efforts, HIV is a chronic, serious and stigmatising disease requiring a lifetime of treatment," the US Judge John Bates observed in his ruling.

The survivor was awarded the cash alongside his other litigant, Ms Jael Oyoo. Ms Oyoo was pulled out of the rubble by rescuers who thought she was dead.

She suffered burns on her body and an injury to the right eye that severely impaired her vision. She spent two years in hospital.

The two are among other survivors of US Embassy bomb blast who will be compensated after suffering injuries during the attack. However not all victims would get

FILE | NATION

Rescuers help a survivor pulled out of the rubble to safety after a terrorist bomb devastated the US Embassy in Nairobi on August 7, 1998. Mr William Maina who contracted the HIV virus while rescuing a victim has been awarded Sh652.5 million by US Judge John Bates who heard the compensation case filed by survivors and relatives of those who died in the blast.

It is only those who worked for the US Embassy together with employees of a construction firm that Mr Maina was working for. The firm had been hired by the embassy for some work.

Those who lost their spouses will get as much as Sh696 million ($8 million) in compensation. Others will pocket Sh609 million ($7 million).

In his ruling, Mr Bates has awarded Sh435 million ($5 million) each to victims who suffered severe physical injuries such as fractures, soft tissue wounds and scars from shrapnel together with severe psychological trauma. "Where physical and psychological pain is more severe – such as where victims suffered relatively more numerous and severe injuries and partially lost their vision and hearing or were mistaken for the dead – courts have awarded upwards of $7 million (approximately Sh609 million) and above," Mr Bates says in a ruling in a case filed by Milly Mikali and others.

They had sued the Republic of Sudan for the terrorists attack.

Giving a breakdown, the judge ruled that where victims suffered emotional injury accompanied by minor physical injuries be paid between Sh130 million to Sh261 million.

But those who endured pain for several hours would receive damages ranging from Sh87 million.

If the victim's period of pain is less, the victim would receive less money.

For instance those who suffered pain for 10 minutes would only receive Sh43 million, Mr Bates clarified.

Victims who lost their parents in the attack will get Sh435 million while those who lost their siblings are to receive Sh217 million.

Families of injured victims were not left out.

A spouse will carry home Sh348 million for the damages a wife or husband suffered while a parent is set to get Sh217 million for his or her injured child.

Loss of a brother or sister in the attack entitles one to Sh108 million.

Different courts in the District of Colombia however differed on the proper award a child is supposed to get for an injured parent.

One court awarded such a child Sh217 million while another one settled for Sh108 million. But the children whose parents died in the attack got Sh609 million.

1998 blast victims to be paid Sh600m each

BY NATION REPORTER

Joash Okindo is among several Kenyans who will be compensated after a US court last week released guidelines for payment of victims of the 1998 Nairobi bombing.

According to the ruling by United States District judge John D. Bates in a case filed by Ms Winfred Wairimu Wamae, Mr Okindo spent about eight months in hospital after suffering a skull fracture. He was in a coma for the first month.

He also sustained shrapnel injuries on the back, legs and hands in the blast at the United States Embassy.

Mr Okindo is among plaintiffs who also suffered severe emotional injuries and have been awarded between $7 million (Sh609 million) and $8 million (Sh696 million).

Another victim, Mr Michael Toma, sustained cuts from shrapnels.

He also suffered internal bleeding in his urinary system and a deflated left lung.

His right eardrum was permanently damaged.

Mr Toma and other victims who experienced similar pain have been awarded $7.5 million (Sh653 million) in compensation.

Mr Moses Kinyua, who was injured during the explosion, is in the same category.

According to court records, Mr Kinyua was in a coma for three weeks after his skull was crushed and jaw fractured. He also lost his left eye.

Brain damage

"The head trauma resulted in brain damage and he spent over six months in hospital."

In his ruling, the judge said the amounts were only guidelines and not rules.

"In the interest of fairness and to account for difficulty in assessing the relative severity of each family member's suffering, the court will depart from those guidelines only for a few plaintiffs for whom the special master's report is particularly convincing," said the judge.

Lokichar Primary School from West Pokot was all song and jubilation when they clinched the anti-corruption trophy on the third day of the music and drama festival yesterday.

The pupils momentarily turned the Aga Khan High School in Mombasa into a dance hall immediately they were announced winners in the category.

They presented a Karamojong folk song that promotes peace and ethnic integration.

The award, sponsored by the Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission, attracted 14 entries.

The performance was particularly poignant because the North Rift has been a hot-bed of ethnic fighting, especially among pastoralist communities.

Kodich AIC Primary School was second and St John Buko from Trans Nzoia was third.

Kodich AIC moved the audience with a powerful tune sung by young men and women after a bumper harvest.

The performances were well received by the audience that included National Schools and Colleges Music Festival national chairman Peter Wanjohi.

But a performer who stood out was Kiyonga Yarasia who showed that the Pokot can actively compete with best when it comes to vocals.

In another category, Brookfield Academy of Nyeri County won in the own composition section sponsored by Unilever.

They presented the song

Tamaa or “Dirt is good, let children play” encouraging school managers to allow children to enjoy their play.

According to trainer Michael Ndambiri “playing helps pupils to discover their talents and develop them”.

Besides the trophy, the 42 Brookfield Academy participants and their teachers were presented with packets of Omo washing powder.

Other organisations sponsoring themes affecting society include the National Police Service, Nacada, the Kenya Tourist Board, Kenya Wildlife Service and Amnesty International.

Meanwhile teams of secondary school participants are expected to arrive at the arrive in Mombasa tomorrow to showcase their artistic pieces at the weekend.

LAND PROBE | Directive comes as ex-commissioner Mabea says title deeds were given out legally

CID order firms' bosses to write statements on Lamu allocations

BY SAMUEL KAZUNGU AND ANTHONY NJAGI
newsdesk@ke.nationmedia.com

Investigations to establish how thousands of acres of public land were allocated in Lamu county have kicked off with CID boss Ndegwa Muhoro ordering directors of the companies linked to the suspect allocations to record statements.

Mr Muhoro, who heads the Directorate of Criminal Investigations, announced from Mombasa that investigations into the contentious allocations of more than 500,000 acres would be carried out jointly by the CID and the Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission.

He spoke at a press conference at the Aga Khan High School in Mombasa where he had gone to assess the security situation at this year's Kenya Schools and Colleges National Music Festival.

Earlier, Lands Cabinet Secretary Charity Ngilu said the investigations had started and the government would stop at nothing to revoke title deeds that were irregularly given out.

"We will not look back. We are very serious on this matter," Mrs Ngilu told the Nation on Tuesday evening at the end of a two-day visit of her ministry's offices in Mombasa, Kwale and Kilifi counties. While there, she held meetings with officials from the ministry as well as governors from the counties as she sought to streamline registries and land allocations in the region.

Yesterday, former Lands Commissioner Zablon Mabea maintained that proper procedures were followed in allocating the thousands of acres in Lamu.

Lands Cabinet Secretary Charity Ngilu inspects the Kilifi land registry on Tuesday. She challenged Senator James Orengo to release the dossier on land grabbing that he said would implicate prominent people.

SAMUEL KAZUNGU | NATION

Speaking for the first time since President Kenyatta ordered the cancellation of titles to the disputed land last week, Mr Mabea said that about 3,200 acres, which form part of the Lamu Port and South Sudan Transport Corridor (Lapsset), had initially been allocated to Mat International by the then Lands minister Kivutha Kibwana.

Following protests from the local communities, who said that they had been sidelined when the land was allocated to outsiders, the property reverted to the Lamu County Council which determined who was to be allocated land. The recommendations that the council made to the Government were then approved by Mr James Orengo when he was the minister for Lands.

Mrs Ngilu said in Kilifi on Tuesday that Mr Orengo — now the ODM senator for Siaya — had questions to answer since he was the minister when the controversial allocations were approved. She said the allocations were effected between March and November 2012.

"In that period, he was in charge so he may be in a better position to say what happened in Lamu," Mrs Ngilu said.

According to her, some of the beneficiaries were yet to be identified.

"It has become extremely difficult to identify some of the owners of the companies who own land in Lamu County. This means that some of the acquiring processes might have been illegal. That is what is the subject of investigations," she said and also challenged Mr Orengo to release the dossier he claims to have on land grabbing.

"If he has the dossier he believes has the names of prominent people who grabbed public land, let him come out and release it.

"But let me remind him that he was in charge of the ministry for some years. Why did he not release it at that time? Why should you wait until you are mentioned and then you say that you have this and that?" she asked.

Mrs Ngilu said that the Government would live by its pledge to recover all illegally acquired land without minding the status of the person or the company that owned the land.

"What we are doing is to repossess all land that was illegal acquired. We don't want to know whether the person or the company concerned is owned by an influential person or not. The policy of the Jubilee government is to bring back the land to the people," she said.

Yesterday, Mrs Ngilu was expected to hold a meeting with Lamu Governor Issa Timamy in her Nairobi office.

We've powers to probe title deeds, lands team insists

BY NATION CORRESPONDENT

Only the Land Commission has powers to initiate investigations into grabbing of property in Lamu, its chairman said yesterday.

Speaking in Kilifi yesterday Dr Mohamed Swazuri (below) said the commission could so either on its own or after receiving a complaint from the national or county governments, individuals or a community.

He was responding to journalists who had asked him whether President Kenyatta's directive to revoke titles for 500,000 acres in Lamu County was legal.

"To us, this is a complaint we received from the national government represented by the President. Earlier on, the Lamu county government had also complained about allocations," he said.

He urged anyone mentioned in a list of those who had been irregularly allocated land to submit relevant documents to the commission for investigations in 15 days.

"After hearing the parties, the commission will rule," he said.

Titles that were irregularly acquired will be revoked.

However, those with bonafide titles will be spared.

The commission also announced yesterday that it will camp in Lamu for a month to regularise Swahili villages and give them title deeds.

The project will cost Sh820,000, Dr Swazuri added.

The process will also benefit Mapenya, Ndambwe, Mkunumbi, Pangani and Kiongwe and starts on Monday.

If he has the dossier he (Mr Orengo) believes has the names of prominent people who grabbed public land, let him come out and release it.”

US-AFRICA TALKS | President criticises countries which issued travel warnings against Kenya after recent grenade attacks

secure, not just Kenya, but the world," he told Mr Richard Quest, the host of CNN's popular show 'Quest Means Business' which airs once a week. "We recognise that security is key in ensuring long-term stability and investment," said Mr Kenyatta.

The interview was aired two days ahead of the 16th anniversary of the August 7, 1998, US embassy bombing in Nairobi during which more than 250 people were killed and over 5,000 others injured when terrorists rammed explosive-laden vehicles in the US embassy at the junction of Moi and Haile Sellasie avenues.

The attack was carried out simultaneously with a similar one against the US embassy in Dar-es-Salaam. A US court recently ruled that embassy staff who were injured and relatives of employees who died will be compensated.

President Kenyatta noted that when the US was attacked by terrorists in September 2001, the whole world rallied behind the country. "This is what we would like to see in East Africa."

Asked whether Kenya felt "a bit alone" in the war on terror, the President said Kenyan forces were in Somalia together with troops from other nations but "we would like to see the world rally behind us and fully support our mission in Somalia so that our forces can expand their operations and reduce the area of Al-Shabaab's operation."

He said the travel advisories issued by some Western countries against Kenya were not only hurting the country but the whole world.

"They don't help in defeating these terrorists. If anything, they encourage and strengthen them."

Earlier in the year, the United States and the United Kingdom, issued several travel advisories warning their citizens against travelling to Kenya after a series of grenade attacks in Nairobi and parts of the Coast. The advisories hurt Kenya's tourist arrivals.

"We feel that the world is not doing enough to support us," said

Mr Kenyatta. And in Nairobi, Kenyans who were injured and those whose relatives were killed in the 1998 bombing said they would move to court after they were left out the recent compensation which was restricted to embassy staff and US citizens.

The Sh650 billion compensation was awarded by the US District Courts in Colombia in a ruling stating that only a section of the victims and their families would be paid for the damages they suffered during the attack.

Workers of a firm that was engaged in construction work at the embassy will also be compensated.

"We are waiting to hear from the government so that we can know its stand concerning our case before we decide what legal steps to take," the chairman of Bomb Blast 1998 lobby group, Mr George Ngigi, told the Nation in a telephone interview.

Commemorate

The group expects the Government to send a representative when they gather at the Bomb Blast Memorial Park in Nairobi to commemorate 16 years since the attack, the worst in Kenya.

"We have been sending several communications to the government and it is only recently we were told to wait after a decision is made on the way forward in our case by the legal department at the Office of the President," Mr Ngigi said.

He said that through their lawyers, they would decide whether to sue Kenya or the US.

Members of the lobby group had engaged lawyers from the US in 2000 who then filed a case in a US court. However, it was not clear how far the case had progressed.

We would like to see the world rally behind us and fully support our mission in Somalia so that our forces can expand their operations”

Obama salutes Kenyan-born factory owner

BY KEVIN J KELLEY
Washington, DC

US President Barack Obama on Tuesday cited a Kenya-born entrepreneur as an example of win-win trade between his country and Africa.

Ms Kusum Kavia, originally a Kenyan of Indian descent, emigrated to the US in the 1980s.

She and her husband, Mukund Kavia, also born in Kenya, launched a power generator manufacturing firm in California in 1989.

The company, Combustion Associates, started exporting generators to Benin, Mr Obama told a business forum held as part of the US-Africa summit.

Win-win situation

"It was a win-win situation for everybody. It was a win for the company's suppliers in Texas, Ohio and New York, and a win for Benin and its people."

A US government agency helped Ms Kavia launch her business and she hopes to expand her company through the Power Africa initiative, Mr Obama said.

Kenya is one of six countries chosen to take part in the programme that aims to bring electricity to 20 million more Africans in five years.

Also announced at Tuesday's business forum was a $250 million (Sh21 billion) US investment warranty to support the construction of the Lake Turkana wind project, the largest in Africa.

Military changes will be fair: Uhuru

BY NATION REPORTER

The Chief of Defence Forces will retire next year, setting the stage for changes in the military.

President Uhuru Kenyatta said once Gen Julius Karangi exits the stage, the government would not interfere with the changes in the military.

"Next year, Gen Karangi will retire and there will be a new CDF in accordance with the military procedures which I have no intention of interfering with. We want the military to remain professional," he said.

Mr Kenyatta said ethnicity would not take centre-stage in selecting the new military boss, adding that the change of guard in the armed forces was always done professionally.

according to laid down procedures without any interference from the presidency or ethnic considerations.

"There is a very clear way and manner in which those issues are handled from the Defence Council and so on."

The recent shake-up in the military hierarchy saw the retirement of Kenya Air Force boss Jeff Otieno, who was replaced by Maj-Gen Samuel Ng'ang'a Thuita with critics reading ethnicity in the move. There were many other changes too.

"We don't bring issues of ethnicity in our military. We follow the laid down procedures," said Mr Kenyatta during an exclusive interview with NTV just before he left for the US-Africa Leaders' Summit in Washington DC.

On the KDF incursion in Somalia, the President said the soldiers would remain there until the country was pacified and the Al-Shabaab militia annihilated.

He said the reasons for sending the soldiers to Somalia were justified.

CONTRACTS SAGA | Public service boss has ordered audit to establish number of such tutors

Teachers job extension defended

Lengoiboni says gesture extended only to individuals with rare qualifications and exceptional skills

rokwany@ke.nationmedia.com

Teachers' employer yesterday defended the extension of contracts for teachers who have reached retirement age of 60 saying they were a crop of "rare" staff.

Teachers Service Commission secretary Gabriel Lengoiboni said the teachers whose terms were extended were not easily replaceable "because of their fields of specialisation and had exceptional teaching skills," he added.

He talked to the Nation on the sidelines of the ongoing Kenya Primary School Heads Association conference at Sheikh Zayed Welfare Centre in Mombasa.

Mr Lengoiboni spoke a day after Public Service head Joseph Kinyua ordered an audit to establish the number of teachers aged 60 and above still in service. He also wanted to know why the teachers' contracts were extended.

The extension was in violation of a directive he issued on February 14 to all principal secretaries and other accounting officers to retire people who had reached 60 years.

Kenya National Union of Teachers secretary-general Wilson Sossion has since also called for the immediate cancellation of the contracts.

But yesterday, Mr Lengoiboni said the extensions were based on valid reasons such teachers gave the commission while applying.

"Teachers have individual circumstances for requesting extensions; some are good performers and even sponsors or parents want them retained," he said.

Others such as fine arts teachers have special skills and replacements are not easy to recruit, he added.

"I do not think it is illegal to give someone a contract if he has something to offer," said Mr Lengoiboni.

He added that they also consider extending terms of service for some teachers who head institutions in hardship areas which lack teachers.

He said the commission has addressed the issue of exceptionally talented teachers and would be identifying successors and start grooming them a year in advance for take-over.

Matatu rules are illegal, says House

BY NATION REPORTER

The rules for public service vehicles introduced by the government in March are illegal, a parliamentary committee said yesterday.

The Select Committee on Delegated Legislation recommended that the National Transport and Safety Authority Regulations on the Operation of PSVs be annulled.

In a report tabled in Parliament, the committee said the regulations contravened the Constitution, the Employment Act and standing orders.

The committee faulted the regulations for extending criminal liability to the owner of a PSV for actions by a driver or conductor.

"Rules of natural justice require that a person be individually responsible for any criminal acts they commit," the report said.

NTSA is also criticised for contravening the Employment Act by stating how PSV crews ought to be paid.

If the House agrees and adopts the report, NTSA will have to submit a fresh set of regulations.

The regulations stipulate that all PSVs should belong to a sacco with at least 30 vehicles, have speed limiters and register all their staff with the National Hospital Insurance Fund and the National Social Security Fund.

NTSA started implementing the regulations in April.

On March 26, Speaker Justin Muturi ruled that the committee could only report back to the House if it wanted part or all the regulations annulled.

"Upon completion of the scrutiny, there is no contemplation of any motion for approval or amendment of the statutory instrument except for annulment where the committee has recommended so," said Mr Muturi (above).

According to the report, there was no explanatory memo attached to the regulations, contrary to the law.

He said the next stop for MPs from the ruling Jubilee Coalition will be the Immigration Department where they allege that immigration papers and work permits were issued irregularly.

Government officials have in the past blamed insecurity on the unregulated issuance of permits and identity cards to foreigners.

Siaya Senator James Orengo, who is also allied to ODM, has come under criticism from Lands Secretary Charity Ngilu who has said that 500,000 acres of land were controversially allocated when Mr Orengo was the Lands Minister under the Grand Coalition Government.

Mr Orengo has in turn threatened to name influential personalities who benefited from illegal allocations in the past.

Suspected carjacker dies in accident

BY NATION REPORTER

A man died after the bus he and his accomplices are suspected to have hijacked was involved in an accident on Mombasa Road on Tuesday night.

According to Nairobi County Police Commander Benson Kibui, the suspect took control of the Rwaken Bus they had hijacked at around 8pm. On reaching City Cabanas, the bus hit a company steel gate.

"Three of them who were armed were robbing passengers as the other drove the bus," Mr Kibui said.

He said the men demanded the bus crew to surrender the money collected earlier.

"They then stole phones, money and other valuables from passengers when the accident took place," Mr Kibui said.

He said the three escaped towards Kiang'ombe slums leaving their dead accomplice behind.

Colleges pull out of admissions board

Medical institute rejects State agency, saying it has right to pick its students

BY MIKE MWANIKI
mmwaniki@ke.nationmedia.com

The fate of about 24,000 people seeking to train at medical colleges hangs in the balance after their selection hit an obstacle.

The Kenya Medical Training Colleges (KMTTC) suddenly withdrew from the government agency processing admissions.

KMTTC board chairman Philip Kaloki (right) said the institution had pulled out of the Kenya Universities and Colleges Placement Board (KUCPB) after realising that it had no mandate to select applicants for colleges affiliated to other ministries.

The KMTTC is affiliated to the Health ministry while the KUCPB falls under the Education docket.

Prof Kaloki said the KMTTC would conduct its own selections. The announcement caught KUCPB by surprise, with chief executive John Muraguri saying he was unaware of the decision.

Prof Kaloki told the Nation that a full board meeting at the KMTTC headquarters in Nairobi yesterday resolved that the selections would be done by its own academic board.

"We have mandated the academic board to fast-track the selection since applicants are expected to join colleges by the first week of September.

"The KMTTC Act empowers this board to carry out the admissions and that is why we resolved that it should continue carrying out its mandate," Prof Kaloki said.

"We will communicate this decision to applicants and the public so that everyone is aware of the development," he said, adding that the KUCPB had been notified of the new development.

The KMTTC courses — nursing, clinical medicine, pharmaceutical technology and physiotherapy, among others — are in great demand.

There are 38 medical training colleges in 30 counties nationwide.

Graduates are absorbed into public, private and faith-based hospitals while many others seek employment outside the country.

Diploma students enrolled in the regular programme pay Sh55,000 fees per year while self-sponsored ones pay Sh95,000 per year.

Judges begin sittings on new media laws

Three High Court judges have begun sittings to determine the legality of the new regulations for media practitioners. Judges Isaac Lenaola, Mumbi Ngugi and Weldon Korir sat for the first time to hear the petitions challenging the Kenya Information and Communication Act and the Media Council Act on grounds that it is unconstitutional and oppressive. The judges, however, adjourned the case after a request by three media houses to be granted 10 more days to file additional submissions. The hearing will take place on October 16.

MPs say new law will spur development at grassroots

BY NATION CORRESPONDENT

MPs yesterday said by passing legislation giving them oversight on CDF cash, they were not duplicating county governments' roles.

The MPs told a court that their goal was to ensure development reached the people at the grassroots.

Through their lawyer Anthony Njoroge, they said they incorporated the views of the public which were then summarised to come up with a law that was in the spirit of improving the life of every Kenyan.

Public ignored

"The public view was that CDF is still relevant. They only had issues with management of the Fund, a fear confirmed by challenges encountered before the introduction of the measures," he said.

The MPs were responding to a suit in which two civil society organisations have sued Parliament over the law giving them authority in management of CDF money.

The Institute of Social Accountability and the Centre for Enhancing Democracy and Good Governance want the entire CDF Act quashed.

They want the role of development projects returned to counties because "they are mandated by the Constitution to undertake growth plans on behalf of the government".

"There was no opportunity to participate accorded to the public. The public was not informed in advance about the Bill," the societies' said.

Activists lose battle to stop devolution of health services

Judge rules that court has no mandate to quash gazette notice authorising new policy

Governors have won the health devolution legal battle against nurses and doctors.

High Court judge Isaac Lenaola yesterday dismissed a case challenging the decision by the Transition Authority, Attorney-General and Council of Governors to devolve health services.

A similar case had earlier been dismissed by the High Court. Health professionals had put their hope in the new suit by activists Okiya Omtatah and Wycliffe Nyakina Gisebe.

Justice Isaac Lenaola

Justice Lenaola declined to quash the legal notice authorising devolution of health services, saying the case involved policies which the court had no powers to formulate.

The activists had argued that hospitals were structured in a way that devolution would interfere with differentiating national referral health facilities and county ones.

They also said the land on which referral hospitals stand belongs to the National Government and it could not simply become county property.

The judge said the two were basing their claims on speculation. "The court has no mandate to name facilities, therefore I cannot quash the gazette notice on speculation, especially on salary issues or terms of services. There are no proper facts to determine whether the Transition Authority and AG acted in excess of their powers in issuing the notice," said Justice Lenaola.

He, however, said his ruling was not final as Parliament was addressing the issue and directed Mr Omtatah, Mr Gisebe and interested parties to raise their concerns there.

The Commission for the Implementation of the Constitution, the Kenya National Union of Nurses and the Kenya Medical Practitioners, Pharmacists and Dentists Union were the interested parties in the suit.

HEALTH | Statistics indicate most counties surpassed the set targets

Country scores big against polio as

Nairobi, West Pokot and Kakamega counties lead in the number of children who were immunised

BY STELLA CHERONO
@stellacherono
scherono@ke.nationmedia.com

Nairobi, West Pokot and Kakamega counties lead in the number of children immunised against polio in the country.

The three counties surpassed the Ministry of Health's target by over 30,000 in the campaign that ended in June.

More than two million children received the Oral Polio Vaccine (OPV) in the three counties.

Statistics from the Disease Surveillance and Outbreak Response Unit (DSORU) at the Ministry of Health showed that most counties surpassed the targets.

Head of DSORU Ian Njeru attributed the uptake of the vaccine to intense campaigns at the national and county levels.

"The country has not experienced any cases of polio in the last financial year ending in July," Dr Njeru said.

During the year, the ministry and its partners managed to immunise over 8.6 million children in the 47 counties out of a targeted total of nine million.

"In West Pokot, the ministry had targeted 501,571 children and managed to administer the vaccine to a total of 541,968," Dr Njeru said.

Other counties in Rift Valley which impressed the healthcare providers with the number of children turning up for the oral vaccine were Nakuru (390,721), Narok (251,390) and Trans Nzoia (236,895).

This gave a 99 percent coverage of the targeted population.

Kakamega's immunisation surpassed its target by over 6,000 children after 406,735 were immunised.

Kisii produced the highest number of children for immunisation in Nyanza at 306,175 children.

Lamu County had the lowest number of children in the country, with only 20,699 being vaccinated, out of the

The ministry will intensify surveillance until the disease is eradicated ... ”

Isiolo, Taita Taveta and Samburu counties too recorded low turnouts of 33,285; 49,404 and 51,863 children respectively.

The ministry attributed the low turnout in these areas to poor infrastructure which made it difficult for mothers to reach the health centres. It also compounded door-to-door immunisation. Other challenges were cultural and religious beliefs.

Despite the low turnout however, the three counties collectively surpassed the previous year's immunisation reach by 16,000.

Director of Medical Services Nicholas Muraguri said the fact that the country had not recorded any case of polio in the last financial year was a great gain in the fight against the disease.

"The ministry will intensify surveillance until the disease is eradicated in the country," Dr Muraguri said.

Although the last case of indigenous polio was eradicated in 1984, population movement had exposed the country to minimal polio transmission incidents since, said Mr Wycliffe Matini, a communication officer at the Ministry of Health's Surveillance and Outbreak Response..

"Poliomyelitis - the virus that causes the disease has several genotypes and every time a case of the disease is reported, medical experts have to get the samples into the laboratory and study it to determine its origin. The genotype classification is important for countering polio," Mr Matini said.

Three categories

From 1984, no polio cases were reported until 2006 when two were detected in Garissa.

Two years later, 19 cases of the disease were reported in Turkana County among children of refugees who had fled South Sudan, before spreading to Kenyan children in Turkana. The genotype was traced to South Sudan.

The disease manifests itself in three categories: sub-clinical - where patients might never have symptoms and the central nervous system is not affected; the non-paralytic - which only produces mild symptoms without affecting the nervous system and finally, the paralytic which is the most serious form of polio and results in full or partial paralysis.

According to the World Health Organisation (WHO), one in every 200 polio infections results in permanent paralysis.

8.6 million children get vaccinated

Fearing that his son was cursed, Kipchumba's father abandoned him; his mother too later abandoned him

BY STELLA CHERONO

@stellacherono

scherono@ke.nationmedia.com

At just six years old, former nominated Senator Harold Kipchumba saw the last of his mother. Forlorn and sickly, he lived by taking whatever the world offered.

Mr Kipchumba had been an active boy who played with other children and climbed up and down the hills of Kaptony Village in Baringo North to fetch water from a river. He also looked after the family's livestock.

Then one day, the boy, who had been the source of hope in the family fell ill. His limbs became numb and he had watery eyes and a running nose. He couldn't even talk. He had contracted polio.

Fear of witchcraft and curses engulfed his family and his father chose to take off.

Five decades of hope and regrets later, he has taken the decision to help parents prevent their children from contracting what befell him.

"Had my parents known 50 years ago, they would have taken me for polio vaccine. Parents, do not let your child go through what I went through,” is his call in a commercial sponsored by the Ministry of Health.

At some point in life, I was rejected several times by the girls I wanted to marry”

Harold Kipchumba

What he does not say in the campaign is the torture he has endured.

"After my father left, my mother carried me on her back and trekked to hospital 70 kilometres away. She did so on several occasions," he says.

One day, he was admitted to hospital and his mother seized that opportunity to disappear too.

"I had become a very heavy burden, both physically and financially," he says.

He was treated for several months and when he was six, he was taken by Nyabondo

Catholic missionaries as an abandoned child.

Kipchumba's parents never came for him. He could no longer walk, but the missionaries took good care of him.

"After passing my O-Level studies, I joined the Duke of York (now Lenana) School in Nairobi," he says.

Unfortunately, his sponsorship was terminated and he was almost dropping out when the school board agreed to retain him.

He completed studies without any more hitches and joined college.

Living with polio has never been easy for Mr Kipchumba. Many a time, he felt life was unfair.

"It is hard to live a life of lagging behind everyone else. I have had to deal with many challenges, especially those bordering on mobility," he says.

He has endured slippery floors and lack of disability-friendly premises. But the worst is the trauma caused by a disapproving public.

"Many people believe the disabled are probably lower humans. They do not value us at all. I was rejected several times by the girls I wanted to marry," Mr Kipchumba says.

Although polio has affected many in the past and reduced them to cripples, medical practitioners believe Kenya has made great strides in fighting the disease.

Key of these is the anti-polio vaccine drives whenever a case is reported.

Ms Juliana Bor, a nurse at Uasin Gishu District Hospital in Eldoret Town administers an oral polio vaccine to Levy Kemoi as his mother Milcah Wanjiru holds him in place last month. Starting January, children will get an injectable and not oral vaccine.

Injectable medicine on the way

BY STELLA CHERONO

@stellacherono

scherono@ke.nationmedia.com

The government plans to roll out an injectable polio vaccine in January next year in an effort to completely eradicate the disease.

The injectable vaccine — Inactivated Polio Vaccine (IPV) — will be administered to six-week-old children, as part of the routine immunisation, according to the Director of Medical Services, Dr Nicholas Muraguri.

"At birth, the child will receive the usual oral vaccine but after six weeks, the child will have to receive the jab," Dr Muraguri said.

The vaccine will be administered alone or together with the other vaccines for diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, hepatitis B, haemophilus and influenza.

"This kind of vaccine has been used in other countries. It has helped eradicate the disease and helped lower cases in other countries," Dr Muraguri said.

Head of Disease Surveillance and Response Unit Ian Njeru said the vaccine jab would be administered on the baby's thigh.

"After two years of administering the jab to the children, we will gradually phase off the oral vaccine and start injecting the children six weeks after birth," Dr Njeru said.

The IPV is produced from wild poliovirus vaccine strains of each serotype that has been inactivated with formalin.

IPV has been used successfully in the polio eradication programmes in the Scandinavian countries and the Netherlands.

Dr Njeru said Sh500 million was used on anti-polio campaigns and subsequent vaccinations.

A single dose of the oral polio vaccine costs Sh51.

Pupils the warriors in war against disease

BY NATION REPORTER

The Health ministry has been applauded for reaching out to millions of children in its recent anti-polio drives.

The campaigns, which were carried out in the past year, ended last month.

400

The number of teachers in Starehe constituency in Nairobi who were integrated into the anti-polio campaign that began in April and ended in June

The Mtoto Kwa Mtoto (Child To Child) campaign was initiated by the ministry.

Children in class six, seven and eight were enrolled as campaigners.

Their work was to persuade more and more parents to allow their children to be given the oral polio vaccine by health workers who were moving from door to door.

More than 30,000 pupils and 400 teachers from 195 public schools in Nairobi took part in the campaign which began in April and ended in June.

Hawa Abdisheikh, 11, a pupil at Murang'a Road Primary School, was one of the 150 campaigners in Starehe constituency.

"We were trained on the effects of the disease, its prevention strategies and the need for every child in the country to be vaccinated," she said.

"Every child integrated in the campaign was given a form. After school, I had to go to my neighbours and asked them if their children had been vaccinated. I checked the children's small fingers to confirm that they had been marked."

If the child had not been vaccinated, the pupil wrote down his or her name. The form had 15 spaces.

"After filling the name of the child, I had to take the form back to school so that the teacher and doctors could do the necessary," Hawa added.

Offer to pay exam fee noble but unrealistic

Deputy President William Ruto's announcement that the government will pay examination fees for Standard Eight and Form Four candidates from next year is clearly a good gesture and demonstrates a desire to make education accessible to all.

However, from a practical point of view, it is unrealistic and unsustainable. So far, the government is unable to meet its commitments to education. In the first place, it is grappling with sustaining free primary education and subsidised secondary education, which are faltering because of lack of funds.

Second, schools are faced with severe shortage of teachers as the government does not have the resources to recruit the required numbers. Thus, although there is a shortfall of some 80,000 teachers in primary and secondary schools, the government will only employ 5,000 this year. Yet teacher shortage is hurting schools and most of them are now on contract at a cost to the parents.

Third, debate is still raging over the recent directive by Mr Ruto that schools release certificates of past candidates who had not cleared their fees arrears. Conservative estimates indicate that the fee defaulters owe schools some Sh14 billion. If the schools are to release the papers, the government will have to provide the cash, which arguably, it may not raise given the prevailing economic conditions.

Fourth, while the government indicates that it will allocate some Sh4 billion for exams, it does not take into account other costs involved in administering the tests. The amount required is far higher and it is not clear how the deficits would be sourced.

Cumulatively, the desire to free parents from paying exam fees is noble, but it is not sustainable. Given the sensitivity of exams, it would be naïve to talk of waiving the fees without proper and supportive framework.

Soccer shuffle cosmetic

Football authorities have taken drastic action with the firing of the entire coaching staff of the national team in the wake of an embarrassing exit from the 2015 Africa Cup of Nations qualifiers at the hands of fellow minnows, Lesotho.

However, we really have to consider whether the departure of coach Adel Amrouche and the arrival of Bobby Williamson will amount to anything more than a change of pallbearers.

If the consensus is that Kenyan football is spiralling towards its lowest ebb, then a change in the Harambee Stars management might mean little when the focus should be directed towards fixing more fundamental ills.

Problems start right at the top of football administration and permeate down to the grassroots where structures hardly exist for the nurturing of young talent. Harambee Stars at present can only be composed of players who come through a dysfunctional system, so changing coaches at that level might not help.

What is required is serious work from junior levels, from where promising talent can be tapped and nurtured through the kind of feeder systems that have proved so effective in Ghana, Cote d'Ivoire, Nigeria, Cameroon and other giants of African football.

Why Ebola has avoided Kenya so far, and others stories of disease

Just as the African story was beginning to sound interesting again, now that we were learning to forget the violence in Central African Republic and South Sudan, along comes Ebola and it spoils the party.

The malady is close to killing 1,000 people in West Africa in the nations of Liberia, Sierra Leone, Guinea and now Nigeria since the first outbreak in March. Suspected infected folks who've passed through Africa or were doctors working to help fight the disease, are beginning to pop up here and there in other parts of the world.

Though doctors still don't know everything about how it is spread, it's believed to initially occur after an Ebola virus is transmitted to humans by contact with infected animal fluids. Human-to-human transmission can occur via direct contact with blood or bodily fluids from an infected person.

So, to put it crudely, it's the hunting, slaughter, and eating of meat from wild animals — including birds and bats — that is mostly to blame for Ebola.

Now scientists are saying that if, especially Africans, don't curb the eating of bush meat, not only could Ebola epidemics get worse in future, but other viruses lying in wait could be unleashed because 75 per cent of new infectious diseases affecting humans are diseases of animal origin.

For that reason organisations like the UN's Food and Agricultural Organisation say that population growth that leads to human encroachment of forests and wildlife reserves, among other factors, will provoke massive killing of wild animals for subsistence or commercial purposes... and strange ailments are likely to emerge from the forests.

Scary stuff. Colleagues at Mail & Guardian Africa landed on data from the Centre for International Forestry Research and the Secretariat of the Convention on Biological Diversity estimating that more than a million tonnes of bush meat are harvested from Central Africa alone each year! That is one billion kilogrammes of bush meat in one region alone.

It depends on how you count it, but if you take the smallest animal as a bird weighing one kilogramme and the larger ones as a big monkey (they eat those in Central Africa) coming in at 50kg, and take the average weight of an animal killed for bush meat to be 20kg, that means our brothers and sisters there are downing 500 million wild animals a year! If some human-eating species, and not we inhabited the Earth, at that rate they would eat half the population of Africa in a year.

In July I was in Rwanda and attended the mountain gorilla naming ceremony Kwita Izina. There was a humorous bloke from Nigeria there, who said there are no mountain gorillas in West Africa because they "ate them all long ago".

These are serious matters, but in Africa if sometimes you don't take a light-hearted view of our problems, you will run mad.

I was chatting with a Kenyan editor when the Ebola story was beginning to gather momentum, and he wondered why Uganda, the Democratic Republic of Congo, South Sudan, have had Ebola but not Kenya considering that it is one of the main transit points in Africa.

Like all true journalists, because I didn't know, I speculated. I suggested to him that it is because Kenyans have cut down or grabbed their forests, and there is little cover for Ebola-carrying animals to hide.

I also offered that Somalia is not a good environment for Ebola, as they have cut down everything green for charcoal.

Perhaps those loony climate change deniers in America should come to Africa, for here they might find the best argument for climate change; it reduces the transmission of deadly diseases from forest wild beasts to humans.

More seriously, and importantly, the Ebola attack demonstrates what is our existential challenge. Those American missionaries who were infected by Ebola were flown home, and they were treated with an experimental drug that seemed to have worked. There are about five such medicines — and vaccine — being developed in the US, although it faces virtually no risk of home-grown Ebola.

However, there is none in Africa, and we have been reduced to criticising the Americans for not doing enough to share their Ebola medicine.

We can build roads, railways, skyscrapers, oil pipelines, name it. But until we do smart science and invest in knowledge and research, we shall still be rich sometime during this century, yes, but we shall never rule it.

MIDDLEMAN MINORITIES | Kiriro wa Ngugi

Why some ethnic groups become pet subjects of hate without even trying

The recent hideous selective slaughter of ethnic Kikuyu in Mpeketoni in Lamu County is not unique in human history. History is replete with such outbreaks of inter-ethnic violence on a massive scale: against the Jews in Europe, the Chinese minority in Southeast Asia, against Ibos in Nigeria, against the Lebanese in Sierra Leone, the Japanese in Peru, Indians in Burma and Armenians in the Ottoman Empire ages ago.

But what do all these groups have in common and why are they hated so much?

According to Dr Thomas Sowell, a Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institute, Stanford University, who is considered America's foremost public intellectual, these victims are often generically "middleman minorities" who can be of any racial or ethnic background.

The perverse hatred of these people is founded on the economic role they play in their disparate circumstances. This role, which we shall outline briefly, even when played by people not ethnically different from those around them, has nonetheless produced explosive mixtures.

The hated groups are thus not defined by ethnicity, race, colour, religion or national origin.

Under this thinking, the Kikuyu in Lamu were not attacked merely because they were Kikuyu, nor were Jews persecuted in Europe merely because they were Jewish. They were killed because of resentment over their role as "middleman minorities" in evolving economic circumstances.

A memorial in memory of the Holocaust in Budapest: 600,000 Jews perished in death camps

Middleman minorities are intermediaries between producers and consumers, whether in the role of retailers or money lenders. Retailing ranges from the modest level of street hawkers and peddlers to that of grand merchants owning chains of stores.

In Kenya, the term "broker" is very well understood to define the "middleman" who does not actually own the goods, services or products he or she sells. They merely link the buyer to the seller but in so doing, they are routinely resented because they are deemed to be making money "from nothing".

There is a deep-seated belief in human nature, arising from the imperative of hard physical manual labour for survival in our primitive past, that only those who handle tangible physical production objects "really" work.

And so middlemen who physically produce nothing are merely parasites who insert themselves gratuitously between the "real" producers and consumers.

This crude misconception of economic theory is at the core of centuries of hostility and violence against many innocent beings, but it is also buttressed by other issues.

In the wider context, as distinguished from an individual "broker", if a particular ethnic group is to become dominant in the economic role of retailing, money lending or such other middleman activity, it implies that certain social patterns of intrinsic behaviour in the group are fundamentally different from that of the surrounding population. Otherwise, the majority population would supply the majority of middlemen in their society.

This crucial difference cannot be simply that the middleman minority has more money. Again and again in different ages and in various countries, the middleman minority has arrived on the scene as destitute immigrants, owning virtually nothing and barely able to speak a few words of the local language.

This was the situation of the vast majority of Eastern European Jews who arrived in the United States of America in the 19th and early 20th centuries. In the same era, Chinese immigrants typically arrived in Southeast countries in similar rock-bottom poverty.

It was much the same story with Lebanese immigrants to colonial Sierra Leone and, much later, the Kikuyu immigrants to Lamu and elsewhere in the country.

But how could such people eventually rise above the native born population around them? Clearly, their values, their discipline, and their culture had to remain different. This has the effect of further alienating them from those around them, hence raising even more potential for resentment.

Yet, if the middleman minorities do not remain different, they would lose their competitive edge and not be of any use to those around them.

This fact has important implications in our debate on ethnicity and economic development.

But whatever economic progress Kikuyu people have made in Lamu or elsewhere as is the case for all other middleman minorities, it has come slowly and as a result of a long uphill struggle and hard work. Killing them will not stop it.

Seek ways to improve quality of healthcare

Since independence, Kenya has struggled to build a system that can effectively deliver quality healthcare to its population. However, this has barely kept up with the population growth. Now with a population of more than 40 million, the sixth highest in sub-Saharan Africa, the healthcare need is higher than ever.

Over the years, the gap between the rich and poor has widened. The affluent are able to access quality healthcare services in private institutions. Such services have, however, proved elusive for the poor.

To combat this inequality, achieve universal access to quality healthcare and meet health-related millennium development goals such as improving maternal health care and reducing child mortality, it is important to ensure the level of services offered is high.

Offering quality healthcare services should be a basic minimum requirement that all Kenyans are entitled to. This is enshrined in the Constitution as well as Kenya's long-term economic development blueprint, Vision 2030.

In Kenya, private clinics provide nearly half of primary healthcare services. Unfortunately, those that are affordable to the poor are often run by under-qualified staff with limited medical supplies.

With the current structure of the public healthcare system, where specialised care can only be accessed at the few referral hospitals, many of the rural poor have been left to basic health centres, dispensaries and small private clinics.

Our health system has been mired in declining indicators, dissatisfied patients and health providers and systems failure. The disparity in the quality of service is clearest within public institutions that also offer private services.

Too many challenges

Fortunately, something exists to bridge this gap. The government and other private entities have a number of models for health, for example, the Kenya Quality Model for Health by the Ministry of Health and the SafeCare Programme, implemented by PharmAccess.

Both are aimed at satisfying patients' needs through improving infrastructure, human resources, hygiene, and privacy. Such initiatives have not been without challenges.

Not many health providers understand the importance of quality models of health, or the benefits such models give to patients.

For instance, the SafeCare standards, designed to gradually improve the level of quality in basic health facilities and district hospitals with limited resources in both rural and urban areas, already has 1,000 clinics in Kenya, Tanzania, Nigeria, Ghana and Namibia.

This has translated into better health services to about one million patients every month.

The National Hospital Insurance Fund is among institutions that have adopted the SafeCare model to introduce the quality standards in all facilities enrolled within its insurance cover.

Too frequently, we have heard stories of patients, especially in rural areas, dying due to lack of resources at the health facilities nearest to them. The struggle is even more evident as some rural patients have to travel thousands of kilometers to access specialised treatment and care, while others remain at home because they cannot even afford travel costs. The quality models of health are aimed at eliminating such sad stories.

We should reach a level where patients can demand quality and safe services when they visit a health facility.

Ms Spieker is the director of SafeCare Programme.

We can't go wrong with Obama's electricity plan

On June 30, 2013, President Obama launched Power Africa, an innovative private sector-led initiative aimed at doubling electricity access in sub-Saharan Africa for more than 600 million people. And on August 5, he sweetened the deal further by unveiling $12 billion, making a total US commitment of $26 billion. This offers great hope to millions of Kenyan youths who wake up every day to find a regret mail for their last job application. Electricity connectivity and economic growth have a strong correlation. Immediately a small rural town and businesses sprout. Farmers too gain as, say, milk coolers are established. We won't go wrong with Obama's Power Africa initiative.

Counties need help in enacting valid laws

The report by the Commission on the Implementation of the Constitution on why few laws are enacted in counties deserves serious attention.

Low literacy among MCAs and poor printing services were among the reasons cited.

On illiteracy, the counties were asked to hire lawyers to evaluate the Bills and advise them. The report also recommended that the Government Printer should devolve its printing services. Having also found out that lack of funding is hampering legislation, the CIC recommends adequate funding. We should adhere to these guidelines to save devolution.

Involve people in vote even for one contestant

While I congratulate Moses Kuria for being declared MP for Gatundu South unopposed, I do not agree with IEBC's cancellation of the by-election. Gatundu people should have been involved in the process of endorsing him.

Questions may arise: As an MP, who elected him? When was he elected? In which event was he elected or endorsed by the people?

Our democratic processes should focus on people's participation. Did IEBC consult the people of Gatundu while making the decision to cancel the by-election?

Let's review electoral laws to address cases of having only one contestant and how the people can be involved in the endorsement.

New appraisal system for teachers will improve quality of education

The plan by the Teachers' Service Commission to introduce a new appraisal system for teachers is a step in the right direction. And the launching of the Teacher Performance and Integrity Initiative will surely go a long way in taking education standards in schools to greater heights.

Under the initiative, TSC will empower teachers and increase public confidence and support for the profession.

The ever-windling performance in public exams has been blamed on teachers. Indeed, the teaching profession — which is always said to be a noble one — has lost its prestige in the society.

Sexually molested

The media have been awash with reports of teachers who sexually molest learners. Some have impregnated their charges. It is disheartening that a teacher can turn into a sex pest and destroy the lives of those entrusted to him.

Other teachers in public schools just do not appear in school to teach. They have chosen to pursue businesses away from school, leading to chronic absenteeism.

Nowadays it is common to see teachers in villages and towns operating businesses such as boda boda. TSC, in its Teacher Performance and Integrity Survey for April 2014, established a worrying trend in absenteeism.

What's more, drug and substance abuse is rampant among teachers. Dozens of them are hooked to drugs thereby impeding their performance. Alcoholism is rife to the extent that some of the teachers go to class drunk or reeling from hangover. This has led to loss of public confidence in teachers. A teacher who drinks himself silly and lies on the road in the full glare of the public, including learners, cannot command respect.

All these justify the TSC plan. Teaching should regain its lost glory and professionalism should be restored. It is unfortunate that most teachers do not adhere to their code of regulation, conduct and ethics. This is the genesis of all misconduct in the teaching fraternity.

So the appraisal system will ensure that teachers increase their attention to learners, demonstrate commitment and teach to the best of their ability.

Teachers should be the leading lights in promoting moral and ethical values, besides ensuring good academic performance. If what the society sees in teachers is not desirable, it loses confidence in them.

Teachers must take it upon themselves to ensure society views them in high esteem by displaying high levels of integrity. It is then that the quality of education will begin to improve.

VIVERE NANDIEMO, Nairobi

Infusing national values into music will make a better Kenya

Schools and colleges are in Mombasa this week for the annual music festival. The theme "Nurturing creative talents for prosperity" is apt. Music, defined as an arrangement of sounds in a pleasing sequence or combination to be sung or played on instruments, is an industry that can no longer be taken for granted.

Students begin by imitation, trial and error under the guidance of teachers to discover the right way of singing and performing. At this formative stage, national values should be carefully infused in the music.

These values include integrity, equity, national unity, human dignity and patriotism. They shape the behaviour of a society. When what one does is seen to be good by society, one is emulated as a role model.

But students ought to know that the world of music is infiltrated by those of immoral behaviour, right from nude dressing to messages that are obscene. This has irritated many and sometimes, watching or listening to music, they switch off.

Parents do not wish their children to be involved in such music. This signifies a society rejecting deteriorating value system in the world of music.

However, if our students can embrace national values in school, good musicians are on the way. Listeners will enjoy their music even more, and the foundations of the nation will have been shaped by music.

ARM KENYANS: Back in the 1990s, the crime rate in Parklands was at its peak. Residents finally approached police chiefs to assist them have firearm licences, to help in containing the runaway crime. Nowadays one can criss-cross Parklands at any time of day or night, with very few cases of crime against pedestrians or drivers. Times have now changed for the worse as regards insecurity. Kenyans of good standing should be armed to defend themselves. Thugs will shy away, thinking it's their 40th day.

The noise from different corners accusing KTDA of all manner of impropriety was becoming unbearable. It is only fair that proper investigations are carried out to clear the air so that the KTDA can focus on improving the sector for the benefit of producers and other stakeholders. KTDA should communicate more authoritatively on the industry.

TSC SHOCKER: An exclusive Nation report revealing how TSC secretly hires retired senior teachers was shocking. It is sad that the teachers' employer could opt for such an option yet thousands of trained teachers remain jobless. To make it worse, this move denies able and qualified deputy heads the opportunity to grow professionally. Some deputies remain in this back-breaking duty for as long as 10 years due to such selfishness. This is morally wrong and should cease.

PHILIP MBINDYO, Ukwala

FORGETFUL NATION: I do not find it amusing that the government has turned the whole Lamu land-grab issue into what it knows best — politics. We forget that what gave rise to the land-grab awareness was the brutal killing of Lamu county residents, that left families homeless and traumatised. We have quickly forgotten the 100-plus deaths of Mpeketoni and Pandanguo. We have quickly forgotten what we were fighting for — justice and peace at the Coast. And now it's all squabbles about how, who and when land was grabbed. We might wake up to yet another mass slaughter.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

Are governors justified to draft the 'save devolution' Bill?

MESHACK K. SANG: Yes, governors are currently 50:50. There seems to be a group that is not for devolution.

KIRUI PHILE SENIOR: No. If allowed, there will be no development in Kenya. Governors should get down to work and concentrate on their areas of jurisdiction.

SKY T KARIUKI: Governors' right to protect devolution is well provided for in the Constitution but they are fighting this war as if they are themselves devolution. Are they fighting to retain control of money or to develop counties? All we are seeing is a plurality of political noises and contests in mediocrity.

CHRISANTUS WECHULI S: The office of governor is a creation of devolution. A threat to devolution is a threat to the governor and Kenyans at county level. The governors, therefore, have all the right to defend devolution and all Kenyans should rally behind them.

County seeking lawyers for case against Britain

Officials instructed to hire reputable lawyers to file compensation suit against London

BY TIMOTHY KEMEI
@timothykemei
timothykemei@gmail.com

The county government is searching for lawyers ahead of a legal battle to pursue billions of shillings from Britain in compensation for historical land injustices against the Kipsigis and the Talai.

Governor Paul Chepkwony said he had directed the procurement office in the county to hire a lawyer of international standing to file a case in London on behalf of the communities.

This comes barely a week after the County Assembly passed a motion mandating the devolved unit to seek compensation on behalf of the communities.

Create space for tea plantations

The ward representatives further demanded a public apology from the British government and UK's royal family over injustices during the colonial era.

The lawyers will be instructed to demand compensation for thousands of surviving relatives of those displaced from their land to create space for tea plantations that characterise Kericho to date.

"The motion passed by the assembly authorises us to file a case against the colonial government for forceful acquisition of land which belonged to the Kipsigis and Talai communities," said Prof Chepkwony.

"We will do whatever is necessary to get justice for those affected."

The governor said the matter was widely covered in the Truth Justice and Reconciliation Commission report presented to President Kenyatta last year.

Information in the report

Information in the report would be used to support the case against Britain, he said.

It will be the second Kenyan compensation case arising from British colonisation.

A similar suit was filed a few years ago by Kenyans who suffered injustices when the colonial government brutalised the Mau Mau freedom fighters. More than 5,000 Mau Mau veterans last year received Sh2.6 billion in compensation from Britain.

In addition, Foreign Secretary William Hague (who has since left office) apologised for atrocities committed by British troops in Kenya during the crackdown.

The amount that lawyers will pursue in the Kericho case would be determined after an assessment of the acreage involved, according to Prof Chepkwony.

"Our people have suffered for the past 100 years in poverty because their inheritance was snatched from them. We will also be seeking the profits due to those people."

The governor denied that the suit would allow the government to repossess land from multinational tea companies including Finlay Tea, Unilever Tea and Williamson Tea.

BACKGROUND

MCAs passed motion paving the way for case

The Kericho County Assembly on Thursday passed a motion mandating Governor Paul Chepkwony (left) and his government to seek compensation from the British government.

Twenty-five ward leaders who attended the session unanimously approved the motion that further urged Queen Elizabeth II to apologise for alleged wrongs committed against the Kipsigis by British colonisers. The motion was moved by Mr Livingstone Kipkoech (Cheptoriet/Seretut Ward).

Uhuru to open Coast fair that has attracted 300 exhibitors

Some 300 exhibitors are expected at this year's Mombasa International Trade Fair. Mombasa Agricultural Society of Kenya chairman Anthony Mrima said the show, which brings together farmers, traders, parastatals, ministries and commissions, would open on August 27 and end on August 31. President Kenyatta is expected to open the fair on August 28. The official said the international exhibitors expected at the five-day fair were from India, Tanzania and Uganda. "The exhibitors will join local ones to showcase modern farming technologies and equipment for sustainable food security," he said.

Last year, he said, the show attracted 180 exhibitors and this number was expected to increase since at least 150 exhibitors had confirmed attendance. Mr Mrima said they were expecting 200,000 visitors. Some 100,000 people attended last year's fair. Yesterday, workers were renovating the showground.

Ndarugu sand mining ban stays, says Nema

The ban on sand mining along River Ndarugu is still in force, a National Environmental Management Authority official has said. Mr Wilfred Osumo, the county Nema director, yesterday said the ban was imposed last year following deaths in the mine, destruction of public infrastructure and the river bank. River Ndarugu drains into the Lake Nakuru National Park, one of Kenya's most visited tourist attractions. In July, a man and his son died when the wall of a mine they were working in collapsed on them at Rhonda estate.

Senate team set to probe deputy governor's ouster

BY DENNIS ODUNGA

@dennisaakwenda

dodunga@ke.nationmedia.com

A Senate committee set up to investigate the impeachment of Machakos Deputy Governor Bernard Kiala has 10 days to determine whether allegations against the official warrant his ejection.

The 11-member team met yesterday and picked Mr Mutahi Kagwe (Nyeri, Narc) as the chairperson and Dr Agnes Zani (Nominated, ODM) as the vice-chairperson.

The committee will assess evidence presented to it by the county assembly against Mr Kiala.

The deputy governor will have to either appear before the committee in person or be represented by a lawyer. Both can also choose to present themselves before the senators.

He faces two charges: gross violation of the Constitution; and gross violation of the County Government Act, Public Ethics Act, National Cohesion and Integration Act, and the Leadership and Integrity Act.

Other senators to investigate the matter include Mr Lenny Kivuti (Embu, APK), Mr Sammy Leshore (Samburu, URP); Mr Abu Chiaba (Lamu, TNA), and Ms Martha Wangari (Nominated, UDF).

Senators Ben Njoroge (Nominated, TNA), Prof Anyang' Nyong'o (Kisumu, ODM), Mong'are Okong'o (Nyamira, Ford-K), Daisy Kanainza (Nominated, ODM) and Omar Hassan Omar (Mombasa, ODM) are also part of the team.

Senate Minority Leader Moses

Mr Bernard Kiala

Wetang'ula (Ford-K) appealed to the committee to approach the matter with an open mind and bring a verdict that upholds the dignity of the House.

Senator Mutula Kilonzo Jnr (Makueni, Wiper) said the people of Machakos were anxious to see how the case would be handled. He said there was need for legislation that would clear doubts following concerns that existing laws do not state clearly how deputy governors are impeached.

Article 181 of the Constitution that gives the grounds for removal of a governor is silent on how a deputy governor can be sent home.

Section 33 of the County Government Act also does not say what should be done to remove a deputy governor from office.

Senate Majority Leader Kithure Kindiki (Tharaka-Nithi) is drafting the Impeachment of Governors and Deputy Governors Bill, 2014 that is aimed at providing a clear path to follow when impeaching a deputy county boss.

Elgeyo Marakwet Senator Kipchumba Murkomen (URP) was hesitant in supporting the formation of the committee, saying that deputy governors lacked a clear mandate in running county affairs.

Mr Kiala will be the first deputy governor to face the Senate committee hearings alone over impeachment.

His Embu counterpart, Ms Dorothy Nditi, was quizzed alongside his boss, Mr Martin Wambora, and found not guilty. She was allowed to resume her duties.

Judge issues directive after tests on killing case accused showed he has history of psychiatric illness

BY EVALYNE GITHINJI

The High Court has ordered Mukurwe-ini MP Kabando wa Kabando's brother, who allegedly killed his mother, be taken to hospital for mental treatment.

Mr Justice James Wakiaga yesterday

The accused was subjected to media interviews despite the matter being in court. This is distressing to the family members, who are still grieving"

Richard Kamotho, lawyer for the Kabando family said Mr Ceasar Thiari, 40, should undergo treatment at Mathari Hospital for one month. The directive follows a psychiatric report presented before the court by State counsel Njeru Njue.

Mr Njue told the court that mental examination results show that the accused has a history of psychiatric illness.

"He is not in full control of his mental functions and thus not in a position to appreciate legal proceedings," said Mr Njue.

The State counsel said that owing to Mr Thiari's state of health, he could not be assigned a lawyer to represent him in court until he receives medical attention.

However, lawyer Richard Kamotho, for the family, raised concern that the matter was being "insensitively" covered by the media.

He asked the court to protect the accused from such coverage.

"The accused was subjected to media interviews despite the matter being in court. This is distressing to the family members, who are still grieving," he said.

The request prompted Mr Justice Wakiaga to order journalists to exercise caution when covering the matter.

Mr Thiari is accused of hacking his 70-year-old mother, Rose Wachera Mwangi Kabando, to death at their home in Kaini Village, Mukurwe-ini, on July 27.

Farmers in Trans Nzoia County have challenged the county government to stop the flow of maize from Uganda as it was destabilising the local market.

"We want measures to be put in place to ensure the maize does not find its way to NCPB," said Mr Rotich.

He also challenged NCPB to ensure that only genuine farmers sold their produce to the parastatal. "Some traders are buying maize and hoarding it," he warned.

The county director of Agriculture, Mr Edward Osanya, however, allayed the farmers' fears. "The Ugandan maize will have been cleared from the market by the time the cereals board in Trans Nzoia begins buying the Kenyan maize," said Mr Osanya.

Governors to ignore summons by Senate

Senators accused of summoning county bosses based on flimsy grounds

jnjagi@ke.nationmedia.com

Governors have resolved not to obey summons from the Senate over the utilisation of funds in their regions.

The county bosses accused senators of undermining county structures by rejecting executives sent to answer questions before House committees.

Council of Governors chairman Isaac Ruto yesterday said summons to governors was an extension of the Senate's attempt to undermine them and usurp their roles.

Briefing the media at the council's offices in Westlands, Nairobi, Mr Ruto said summons to governors were part of measures to undermine devolution. "The Council of Governors wishes to express its resolute decision not to attend summons from the Senate."

Denying funding to level five hospitals and senators being made chairpersons of county development boards were other ways in which The

The Council of Governors wishes to express its resolute decision not to attend summons from the Senate"

House was stifling county operations, he said.

The governor spoke a day after Public Accounts and Investment Committee chairman Boni Khalwale criticised him for failing to appear before the team on Monday to answer audit queries in expenditures for Bomet County.

He defended himself saying summoning of governors should be the last resort as county government officials such as executives and finance officers were the most appropriate people to explain expenditure in the counties.

"Every time we send our executives and finance officers, they are chased away and the senators insist on seeing governors.

"The senate committee should say what it wants because it should listen to the officers and then call governors if there is a complicated matter that needs to be handled."

He said requiring governors to honour summons on "flimsy" grounds would affect county operations as they would have to travel to Nairobi just to appear before committees over matters that other officers can competently handle.

The Bomet Governor asked the Senate to respect the two levels of government, saying county assemblies were mandated by law to oversee county operations.

Strategic plan targets tourism

BY LUCAS BARASA

Governor Samuel Ragwa has launched the county's strategic plan that targets agriculture, tourism and investment.

Mr Ragwa (right) said public-private engagement would play a critical role in helping the county to realise sustained economic growth.

"As a government, we are committed to providing an enabling environment for the growth of the business sector in the county with specific emphasis on agriculture and tourism sectors," he said during the launch yesterday.

The tourism and agriculture sectors had the greatest potential of unlocking the economic potential of the county and would be enhanced through close collaboration between the public and private sectors, according to the county.

The governor said the county and the National Government were jointly developing the Muringa banana irrigation scheme in Maara constituency and the Mbogoni irrigation project in Chuka.

A Sh120 million Jica-supported irrigation scheme was being built in Miomponi, Tharaka, he added.

Mombasa | Bail application opposed

Two deny recruiting for Shabaab

Magistrate remands the accused in custody until August 25 when their case will be heard

BY PHILIP MUYANGA

@philipmuyanga
pmuyanga@ke.nationmedia.com

Two men were yesterday charged with recruiting other people to join Al-Shabaab.

Mr Mkauma Ali Mbuiya and Mr Kalume Ibrahim Dunda are said to have, with others not in court, been found in Boni Forest on the Kenya-Somali border, attempting to cross into the neighbouring country with the intention of joining the terror group.

Mr Mbuiya and Mr Dunda are said to have committed the offence on July 7 in Mazeras Township, Kilifi County.

They denied the charge before chief magistrate Stephen Riechi, who remanded them in custody until August 25 when the case will be heard.

The prosecution opposed their plea to be released on bail. "The accused are likely to interfere with witnesses if released on bond. They are also likely to abscond and go to Somalia to join Al-Shabaab," said police officer Gabriel Karugu in an affidavit.

Threat to national security

The accused, who were unrepresented, were a threat to national security, he stated. "As much as we respect the accused's right to be released on bond, the right is limited and should not supersede that of national security," said Mr Karugu.

Meanwhile, a court last week issued a warrant of arrest for a police officer investigating a case involving British terror suspect Samantha Lewthwaite and her suspected Kenyan accomplice.

The court had ordered the officer in charge of the Anti-Terrorist Police Unit to execute the warrant.

Ms Lewthwaite had been charged in absentia with being in possession of explosives and conspiracy to commit a felony. The case was first filed in court on January 4, 2012, and has since been mentioned 28 times before different magistrates.

Bid to quash petition filed by sacked finance boss

BY EUNICE MACHUHI

The county government wants a petition filed by an executive challenging his impeachment struck out.

In a preliminary objection against the petition filed by finance executive Walid Khalid (below), the county says the Industrial Court lacks the constitutional jurisdiction to determine matters of county governments in their capacity as legislative organs.

Mr Khalid moved to court after he was impeached for alleged incompetence, abuse of office and violating the Constitution.

Ignored order

Industrial Court judge Musa Radido reinstated him on August 1 and issued a conservatory order suspending Governor Hassan Joho's decision to remove him.

However, the county assembly ignored the order and went ahead to impeach Mr Khalid even after he was cleared of wrong-doing by a sub-committee that investigated the allegations he was facing.

Justice Radido said in his ruling that there was clear evidence of disobedience of his orders.

The parties will argue their preliminary objections on September 3.

The accused are likely to interfere with witnesses if released on bond. They are also likely to abscond and go to Somalia to join Al-Shabaab"

Baringo | Senator won land ownership battle

Squatters on vast Moi land refuse to leave

A judge ruled that the 2,500 acre property belongs to Gideon but the settlers want to stay pending appeal

BY WANJIRU MACHARIA
@wanjirumachari1
lwamacharia@ke.nationmedia.com

Hundreds of squatters at Lomolo Sisal Estate have protested at attempts by Baringo Senator Gideon Moi to remove them.

The squatters and the senator were involved in a protracted legal battle for ownership of the 2,500 acre property in Mogotio, which ended in Mr Moi's favour.

The squatters said Mr Moi had begun digging trenches around the land and was driving out their livestock.

"He is digging deep gullies around the farm destroying our cattle sheds and threatening us with eviction yet we have filed a notice of appeal against the judgement," said one of the squatters.

The trenches are meant to prevent the animals from entering the disputed farm, according to the squatter.

In 2002, Mr Moi, through Deans Estate Ltd, bought the land from Mr Harry Horns at Sh50 million.

The squatters, under the Korinytich Farmers Group, moved to court four years later, seeking to be declared legal owners of the land through adverse possession.

They asked the court to bar Lomolo 1962, which had been managing the farm, and Deans Estate Ltd from entering, alienating, selling or trespassing on the land.

They claimed that they had constructed cattle dips, primary schools, a dispensary dams and even buried their dead relatives on the property.

However, Lomolo's officials said the group's members were employees in the sisal farm and were only allowed to graze their cattle on it.

Mr John Oduor Ojera, who was a business development manager at the estate before the land was sold to Mr Moi, told the court that the squatters lived around the property and only got permission to herd their livestock on the land.

Registered owner

Justice William Ouko ruled that Deans was the absolute and registered owner of the land and dismissed the case.

He ruled that the squatters were trespassers on the property, and issued permanent orders restraining them from occupying the land or interfering with the company's peaceful ownership.

The squatters have filed a notice of appeal against the decision and therefore, feel that they should be allowed to stay. They said local administration and police were intimidating them to leave.

Leaders pay tribute to 'reformist and inspiring' don

BY MOSES ODHIAMBO

Leaders from all walks of life yesterday paid glowing tribute to former University of Nairobi lecturer Kavetsa Adagala (below) who died in her home on Sunday after a long fight with diabetes.

She died at her Vohovole Village, Sabatia Sub-county in Vihiga County.

They said the late Adagala leaves behind an unparalleled legacy following her contribution at the Constitution of Kenya Review Commission.

It was her and Prof Yash Pal Ghai who openly associated themselves with the Bomas Katiba Watch — the reform lobby group founded by former delegates that advocated the adoption of the Bomas Draft Constitution.

Adagala, who was also the founder of the Maragoli cultural festival was praised for her role in instilling literary skills among her students.

Ms Adagala was described as a heroine who fought for reforms and to change the status quo.

Bungoma Governor Kenneth Lusaka and his Busia counterpart Sospeter Ojaamong said they received the news of her death with shock.

"I am shocked. She was my lecturer," said Mr Lusaka.

"The lovely lady has left behind an unparalleled legacy as an educationist, culturalist and rights campaigner," Mr Ojaamong said.

Good lecturer

"What a tragic loss. Kenya needed her commitment and energy now as much as at anytime before," Mr Oduor Ong'wen a political activist said.

Mr Suba Churchill, an activist, said he remembers the late commissioner as a mentor to young Kenyans.

"Kavetsa was one of the few depositories of the ideology of the Constitution of Kenya (2010) and a forthright defender of the rights of women in the country", added Mr Churchill.

Mr Kibisu Kabatesi, the spokesperson of Amani leader Musalia Mudavadi, said Adagala had a command of languages which she instilled in students. Social media users also lauded the don.

"Fare thee well Mwalimu, your struggles will never be in vain," Mr Boaz Waruku posted on Facebook. She will be buried on Saturday August 9 at her home.

Sh4bn multi-storey car park plan for city centre

BY OTIATO GUGUYU

Motorists' parking woes might soon end as the Nairobi County plans to build a Sh4 billion multi-storey car park in the city centre.

This is among proposals made by a taskforce constituted earlier this year to find ways of decongesting the capital.

In its interim report, the team recommended that on-street parking be abolished, with multi-storey parking lots set up, preferably in partnership with private developers.

The increase in parking fees from Sh140 to Sh300 has done little to reduce the influx of vehicles into the city centre.

The new multi-level parking building, which will replace the 'sunken car park' on Taifa Road, will include a commercial centre and a training facility.

The county has called for bids from private companies to plan, build and operate the parking lot.

Meanwhile, Nairobi Governor Evans Kidero (above) in June announced that there were plans to introduce levies for taxis from outside Nairobi to access the city.

Probe urged over funds set aside to rebuild roads

BY DENNIS LUBANGA

Governor Simon Kachapin has urged national government agencies to investigate the Kenya National Highways Authority to establish the whereabouts of funds that were allocated for rehabilitation of a highway in the region.

The county boss yesterday said the road linking Kitale, Kapenguria and Lodwar was deplorable.

He urged the investigative authorities to quickly establish what happened to billions of shillings allocated for road projects in the region.

Two years since the National Treasury allocated funds for the road that links his county to Trans

Nzoia and Turkana, work had not started, he said.

The bad state of the highway had contributed to insecurity in the North Rift region, according to the county boss.

"Armed bandits have taken advantage of the poor state of road across the three counties to carry out raids that have resulted in loss of lives and property and displacement of families."

Infrastructure development

Addressing journalists in Eldoret Town yesterday, Mr Kachapin accused the national government of letting down the people of the North Rift on infrastructure development.

County chief breaks ranks with central leaders, saying a vote is needed over money

BY STEPHEN MUTHINI
@stevenmuthiny
smuthini@ke.nationmedia.com

Nyeri Governor Nderitu Gachagua yesterday broke ranks with governors from the central region by supporting calls for a referendum.

The governor, who was elected on a GNU ticket, said he supports a vote to push for more resources to be allocated to counties.

The party is part of the ruling Jubilee Coalition.

Mr Gachagua said even when the governors held meetings with the President and agreed on certain things, the same was frustrated by the National Assembly.

“We are supporting a referendum for 45 per cent of resources to be devolved to counties. We want to come to the people. It has to be determined by the people of Kenya,” said Mr Gachagua.

The number of Bills before the Senate that he says are illegal

45

The percentage of funds that he wants given to counties

The governor also took issue with the proposal to set up County Development Boards chaired by Senators saying the move was unconstitutional and an act of mischief.

He said Section 54 of the Constitution spells out how development in counties should be coordinated and that governors are tasked with implementing development projects.

“County Development Boards are unconstitutional. The move is mischievous. We have already passed our budgets and there is no provision for them. This is an offence to devolution,” said the governor.

Workers not paid

Mr Gachagua added that there were 23 other pieces of legislation before Senate which were unconstitutional.

He said the governors had decided to use all means to make sure the pieces of legislation do not see the light of day.

He said the county had already put in place an Integrated County Development Plan for the next five years and wondered whether the Senator is going to change it.

The Nyeri governor said they had not yet paid their staff because a bill on allocation of funds to the counties was still pending before the Senate.

Nairobi | Man accused of defaming MP on Facebook

Mr Mbuvi Kasina in a Nairobi court yesterday where he was charged with five counts of posting annoying messages on his Facebook page “Kitui South Group Leadership oversight group” in which he knew to be false for the purpose of causing needless anxiety to MP Rachel Kaki Nyamai. He denied the charges and was released cash bail of Sh100,000. The case will heard on October 6.

Tanzania to restore northern rail line

BY GITONGA MARETE

Tanzania plans to revamp its railway system in the northern part of the country to improve business with Kenya.

Transport deputy minister Charles Tizeba said feasibility studies on the refurbishment of the Tanga-Arusha-Moshi railway line had already been completed.

“We have not yet settled on the modalities of financing the project but we are exploring a private-public partnership. But we are determined to have the railway line up and running,” he said at the Mombasa port.

Oil handling facilities

Mr Tizeba and a delegation from his government were touring the port’s oil handling facilities.

“One thing we should remember is that the borders of today were set up by the colonialists. The truth is that we are one people, with members of the same communities spread across the borders. We are still brothers and sisters and should improve our businesses together,” he said.

Kenya Ports Authority chairman Danson Mungatana said Kenya was committed to improving the road network between Voi and Taveta town. He said the road was already under construction.

Patients are being treated in an isolation ward in Lagos while two have died

ABUJA, Wednesday

Nigeria today confirmed five new cases of Ebola in Lagos and a second death from the virus, bringing the total number of infections in sub-Saharan Africa's largest city to seven.

“Nigeria has now recorded seven confirmed cases of Ebola Virus Disease (EVD)” health minister Onyebuchi Chukwu said.

Those who have died include the “index patient,” a Liberian who brought the virus to Lagos on July 20, and a nurse who treated him, the minister added.

“All the Nigerians diagnosed with EVD were primary contacts” of Patrick Sawyer, who worked for Liberia's finance ministry and contracted the virus from his sister, Chukwu said.

He travelled to Nigeria, Africa's most populous country, for a meeting of west African officials.

Visibly sick upon arrival at the international airport in Lagos, officials said he was immediately transferred to the First Consultants hospital in the upmarket Ikoyi neighbourhood.

He died in quarantine on July 25 and the hospital has since been closed.

The five Ebola patients are being treated in an isolation ward in Lagos, the minister told journalists.

Meanwhile, Spain sent an air force plane today to Liberia to fly home an elderly Spanish missionary infected with Ebola, the first patient to be returned to Europe in a fast-spreading outbreak of the deadly disease.

The military Airbus A310, specially equipped for a medical evacuation, took off for the west African country from Madrid's Torrejon military air base at around 1:30 pm, the defence ministry said in a Twitter message.

Miguel Pajares, a 75-year-old Roman Catholic priest, tested positive for Ebola at the Saint Joseph Hospital in Monrovia where he worked, according to the Spanish aid organisation he works for, Juan Ciudad ONGD.

Repatriated to Europe

Since breaking out earlier this year, the epidemic has claimed 932 lives and infected more than 1,700 people across west Africa, according to the World Health Organization.

Other cases have been reported in Guinea, Sierra Leone and Nigeria.

The Spanish priest will be the first person infected in the African outbreak to be repatriated to Europe for treatment.

Two Americans who worked for Christian aid agencies in Liberia and were infected with Ebola while taking care of patients in Monrovia were brought back to the United States for treatment in recent days.

“We regret all this because these people were here to help us and they are going back with illness,” Liberian Information Minister Lewis Brown told AFP in Monrovia.

Specialised hospital

The Spanish patient, who has worked in Liberia for more than five decades, will be treated at the Hospital Carlos III in northern Madrid which is specialised in tropical diseases, a hospital spokesman said.

“This news has lifted my spirits, it is great, I am very happy. It is worth fighting on,” he told the online edition of daily Spanish newspaper ABC by telephone when told that he would be repatriated.

During an interview broadcast on Monday, the Spanish priest had said he and the other missionaries wanted to be taken to Spain for treatment.

“I have a fever. I don't have any appetite, I could go without eating anything, I have a lot of pain in my joints. I need help to move from one place to the other,” he told CNN en Espanol, a 24-hour Spanish-language news network. The Spanish defence ministry said the Airbus A310 was equipped to safely transport three patients without risk of contagion if required to do so.

The Spanish priest's cousin, Begona Martin, appealed for the Spanish government to evacuate the African missionaries who

WHO calls meeting on new drug

GENEVA, Wednesday

The World Health Organization said today it was convening an ethics meeting next week to explore the use of experimental treatment in the Ebola outbreak in West Africa.

The move comes after two health workers from the US charity Samaritan's Purse were treated with medication that the WHO said had never been tested and shown to be safe in people.

“We are in an unusual situation in this outbreak. We have a disease with a high fatality rate without any proven treatment or vaccine,” said Marie-Paule Kieny, assistant director-general of the UN health agency.

“We need to ask the medical ethicists to give us guidance on what the responsible thing to do is,” she said in a statement.

Samaritan's Purse members Kent Brantly and Nancy Writebol were stricken with Ebola while treating patients in Liberia.

The patients, who were rushed to the United States amid tight medical security, were reportedly given an experimental drug known as ZMapp.

Both have shown improvements in their health and are now being treated in isolation at an Atlanta, Georgia hospital.

There is currently no registered medicine or vaccine against the Ebola virus — which in the past has shown fatality rates approaching 90 per cent — but there are several experimental options under development.

The WHO said experimental drugs raised questions about whether they should be deployed during such an outbreak and, given the extremely limited amount available, who should receive them if they were used. (AFP)

Saudi Ebola suspect dies

RIYADH, Wednesday

A Saudi Arabian who had travelled to Sierra Leone and had symptoms similar to those found in Ebola sufferers died today of a heart attack, the health ministry said.

“The patient died of cardiac arrest, despite efforts by the medical team to resuscitate him,” the ministry website reported.

It added that the man will be buried in the Islamic manner, but under precautions laid down by the world health authorities.

The ministry did not reveal the results of tests carried out abroad on whether the patient had been suffering from the Ebola virus. (AFP)

Suez project is expected to create one million jobs and turn Egypt into an industrial, mercantile hub

President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi

CAIRO, Wednesday

President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi launched yesterday the construction of a $4 billion “new Suez Canal” that aims to speed up traffic along the existing waterway and boost Egypt’s battered economy.

The project foresees the creation of one million jobs at a time when Egypt is struggling to recover from more than three years of political turmoil since the ouster of long-time autocrat Hosni Mubarak.

President Sisi, accompanied by government ministers and army generals, set an ambitious target of digging the new canal, which would run parallel to the original Suez Canal built 145 years ago. “No matter what it takes, this project must be finished in a year. That is what Egyptians expect,” President Sisi said at an inauguration ceremony in the Suez Canal city of Ismailiya.

Officials said the new waterway would be funded by Egyptian and foreign investors.

shares in the project would be offered to domestic investors at a rate of 100 Egyptian pounds (about 14 dollars, 11 euros) each, and $100 per share for expatriates.

The canal would be constructed by 17 private Egyptian companies under “the direct supervision” of the armed forces, said President Sisi.

In a colourful ceremony broadcast live on state television, President Sisi was accompanied by men, women and children as he blasted away a mound of sand symbolising the start of work on the canal. Shortly afterwards, hundreds of men were seen digging with shovels to loud music playing in the background.

The project was initially to be constructed during the rule of now deposed president Mohamed Morsy, backed by funding from Qatar, whose ties with Egypt have deteriorated since the Islamist’s ouster in July 2013.

Dubbed the Suez Canal Axis, the new 72-kilometre project would run part of the way alongside the existing canal that connects the Red Sea to the Mediterranean.

It will involve 37 kilometres of dry digging and 35 kilometres of expansion and deepening of the existing Suez Canal, which will help to speed up the movement of vessels.

“The total cost of digging the new canal is 29 billion Egyptian pounds ($4 billion),” said Mohab Memesh, head of the Suez Canal Authority.

“It is expected to provide more than one million job opportunities and will turn Egypt into an industrial, mercantile and logistic centre.” (AFP)

Several injured in skirmishes over water in Cote d’Ivoire

ABIDJAN, Wednesday

Several people were injured following skirmishes caused by shortage of water in Abidjan’s Yopougon suburb, eyewitnesses told Xinhua yesterday.

Residents of the area said shortage of water that has lasted several days was the major cause of fighting between two different groups. Residents who included women and children flocked to water points to draw water but the shortage of the commodity led to scuffles between them, leaving many of them injured.

The residents deplored “severe” shortage of water and urged the government to put in place an effective mechanism for supplying water to residents.

Cote d’Ivoire authorities have reinforced mechanisms for supplying water to the population. (Xinhua)

Machar to blame over S. Sudan war, says Kerry

Igad warns of punitive action that has to be taken immediately after the US meeting

BY KEVIN J KELLEY
NATION Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Wednesday

US Secretary of State John Kerry and East African leaders jointly blamed South Sudan rebel chief Riek Machar yesterday for continuing a war that has taken thousands of lives and may soon cause a famine.

The Intergovernmental Authority of Development (IGAD) said it will take "punitive action" if South Sudan's warring parties fail to meet an August 10 deadline for establishing a transitional government, Ethiopia's prime minister said.

"It is our judgment — and the former Vice President Mr Machar needs to understand this—that it was his initiative that broke the agreement and took his troops back into a violent status," Mr Kerry declared.

Mr Kerry made his comments on the sidelines of the US-Africa summit after a meeting on Tuesday with President Uhuru Kenyatta and leaders of three other Igad member states.

Ethiopian Prime Minister Hailemariam Desalegn, the spokesman for the Igad group, echoed Mr Kerry's accusation. "The violation of the ceasefire has taken place by Riek Machar," Mr Desalegn declared.

The Ethiopian leader then warned of unspecified "punitive action that has to be taken immediately after convening the meeting of Igad heads of state and government in Addis Ababa very soon after this summit.”

The rebel side failed to attend peace talks in Ethiopia on Tuesday, with organisers saying it was not clear why Mr Machar's representatives had not shown up.

“Riek Machar is not in control of what he calls his army,” South Sudan President Salva Kiir charged prior to talks on Tuesday with Secretary Kerry.

“And so each commander in different areas are operating on their own.”

President Kiir added that the war in his country “could have been resolved a long time back, but we get difficulty on the side of the rebels.”

Mr Kiir blamed Mr Machar's forces for violating ceasefire agreements signed in May and June. Secretary Kerry, on his part, was warm in welcoming President Kiir to Washington and offered no criticisms of the South Sudan government in his remarks on Tuesday.

The United States has said since the start of the fighting last December that it regards President Kiir as the legitimate leader of South Sudan and would oppose his overthrow.

Somalia seeks urgent aid amid serious drought

BY ABDULKADIR KHALIF
NATION Correspondent
MOGADISHU, Wednesday

Somalia's Minister of Agriculture Abdi Ahmed Baafo has called on the international community to help the country tackle a devastating drought that is affecting many parts of the country.

Mr Baafo who chairs a special Federal Government Committee on drought, said aid in form of food, water and medication, must urgently reach the affected regions.

The drought has affected southern and central regions of Somalia among them Gedo, Bakool, Hiran, Galgudud and Mudug. He said though the government allocated USD500,000 in July to assist those affected, there are major challenges affecting food distribution.

“The Somali National Army is ready to assist its people but lacks the right transportation equipment to deliver food aid to the regions and therefore requests the immediate assistance of the United Nations and the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) to facilitate food delivery to the people living in regions which had already been liberated from Al-Shabaab,” he said.

In recent months, aid agencies reported that hunger was set to worsen in Somalia due to rising food prices, irregular rains and a lack of access to people in need. The situation was reported to undermine efforts to rebuild the war-torn country.

The UN made a $933m humanitarian appeal for Somalia in 2014, but the body reported that it was only 25 percent funded.

SHUTTLE DIPLOMACY | Proxy talks

Egyptian efforts pay off in truce

Intelligence mediators meet with Israeli and Palestinian teams to relay laid down terms

CAIRO, Wednesday

Egyptian officials mediating talks for a durable truce in Gaza met a Palestinian delegation today to relay terms laid down by an Israeli team, Palestinian officials said.

The Egyptian intelligence mediators had met with the Israeli delegation in Cairo during the night, the officials said.

Wednesday's shuttle diplomacy came as a fragile ceasefire in the Gaza Strip after a month of fighting between Hamas and Israeli forces appeared to be holding for a second day.

Palestinian officials in Cairo said they would respond to the Israeli terms through the Egyptian officials, although a senior Hamas official has already rejected an Israeli demand that militants in Gaza disarm.

Meanwhile international Middle East peace envoy Tony Blair and UN Middle East peace process coordinator Robert Serry were scheduled to hold talks with Egyptian officials later on Wednesday.

The Egyptian-mediated 72-hour ceasefire that went into effect on Tuesday has brought relief to both sides after fighting that erupted on July 8 killed 1,875 Palestinians and 67 people on the Israeli side.

The talks in Cairo are aimed at securing a durable ceasefire after the three-day window closes.

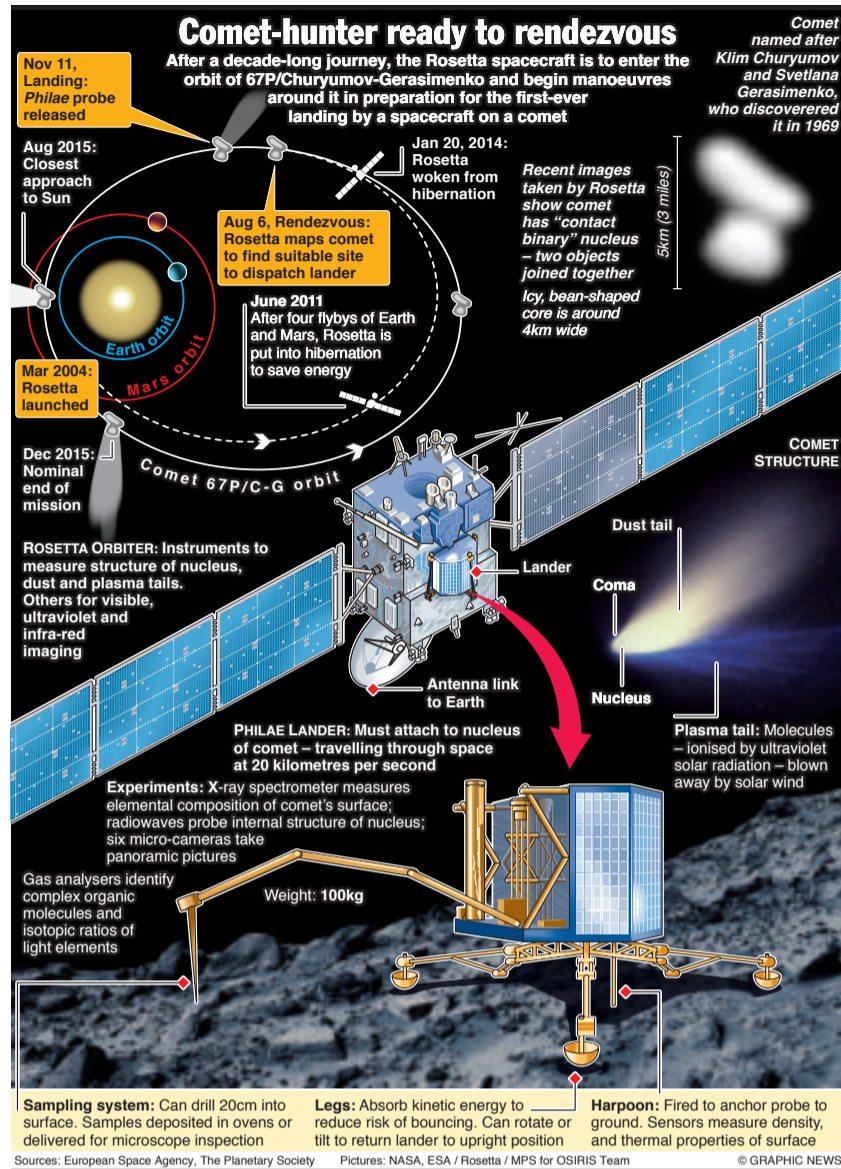

Experts say the underlying problems in Gaza, a small coastal enclave flanked by Israel and Egypt that has undergone three conflicts with Israel since 2008, would also have to be addressed.

US Secretary of State John Kerry, in a BBC interview, called for a sustained ceasefire but stressed that the crucial wider issues would need to be tackled.

The Palestinians demand an end to the eight-year Israeli blockade of Gaza and the release of Palestinian prisoners. They are also demanding an airport be allowed to operate in Gaza. (AFP)

The space probe Rosetta today made a historic rendezvous with a comet, climaxing a 10-year, six-billion-kilometre chase through the Solar System, the European Space Agency (ESA) said.

"We're at the comet," Rosetta's flight operations manager, Sylvain Lodiot, declared in a webcast from mission control in Darmstadt, Germany. It is the first time that a spacecraft has ever gone into orbit around a comet, a wanderer of the Solar System whose primeval dust and ice could hold insights into how the planets formed. (AFP)

POLITICS | Mayor says he intends to serve out his full term

Cameron challenger to stand as British MP

Premier welcomes move saying ‘my star players should be on the pitch’

LONDON, Wednesday

London Mayor Boris Johnson indicated today that he would stand for election to the House of Commons next year, a move that could eventually position him as a successor to British Prime Minister David Cameron.

The comments from Johnson, known for his messy shock of blond hair and clownish antics, end months of speculation about whether he would return to national politics.

Some in Mr Cameron’s Conservative Party see Mr Johnson as a popular figure with a high profile who could be a successful future leader if he were to win a seat at next May’s general election.

“In all probability I will try to find somewhere to stand in 2015,” Mr Johnson said following a speech in London.

Mr Boris Johnson, London mayor

But the 50-year-old added that he intended to serve out his full term as London’s mayor, which does not end until 2016.

He has always publicly played down his chances of eventually becoming prime minister, saying they were about as good as those “of finding Elvis on Mars or my being reincarnated as an olive.” Mr Cameron’s Conservatives, currently senior partners in a coalition government, face a tough fight to win next year’s election.

A YouGov/Sun poll out Wednesday put the Conservatives on 33 per cent, the main opposition Labour on 38 per cent, junior coalition partners the Liberal Democrats on eight percent and the anti-EU UK Independence Party on 12 per cent.

While Johnson has a high international profile, several other leading Conservatives are also seen as strong contenders to succeed Cameron should he step down.

These include finance minister George Osborne and Home Secretary Theresa May.

Mr Johnson and Mr Cameron are old rivals who attended the elite Eton College and Oxford University together. Despite their long rivalry, Mr Cameron welcomed the announcement as “great news”, writing on Twitter: “I’ve always said I want my star players on the pitch.” (AFP)

Hiroshima marks bomb anniversary

HIROSHIMA, Wednesday

Tens of thousands of people gathered for peace ceremonies in Hiroshima today, marking the 69th anniversary of the US atomic bombing of the city, as anti-nuclear sentiment runs high in Japan.

Bells tolled as ageing survivors, relatives, government officials and foreign delegates observed a moment of silence in the rain at 8:15 am local time when the detonation turned the western Japanese city into an inferno. People attending Wednesday’s ceremony placed flowers in front of the cenotaph at Peace Memorial Park in downtown Hiroshima.

The city’s mayor Kazumi

Matsui recalled the grim memories of one survivor at a ceremony attended by Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and US ambassador to Japan Caroline Kennedy.

The survivor, a 15-year-old pupil at the time, remembered hearing “voices from the brink of death” begging for “water, please”. (AFP)

Kenya lines up raft of mega-projects on the road to middle income status

They span real estate, power, health and water among others, expected to boost country's business profile

BY CHARLES WOKABI
cwokabi@ke.nationmedia.com

A list of multi-billion infrastructure projects was released yesterday that will be handed over to the private sector in a bid to make Kenya a middle-income status nation.

In an advertisement yesterday, the National Treasury said it had received approval for 59 projects that the government plans to execute through public/private partnerships.

The projects range from telecommunications, agriculture, health, energy, transport, real estate to water and sewerage.

More than a quarter of the projects involve construction of roads, railway, ports and railway lines, highlighting the government's focus on improving transport to make it easy to do business in the country.

Long-term solution

This is intended to improve the country's business environment.

Treasury principal secretary Kamau Thugge said the public private partnership approach was long-term that could improve the government's quest to realise a double digit economic growth rate.

"Kenya's public/private partnerships is not as a series of independent projects. The national list of projects published here has been subjected to a series of sustainability checks and has been granted formal clearance by the Cabinet to proceed for development," Mr Thugge said.

Projects under the Ministry of Transport and Infrastructure include construction of major highways, maintenance of the green field terminal at the Jomo Kenyatta International Airport and development of container terminals at the Port of Mom-

PETER WARUTUMO | NATION
Turkana County Governor Joshat Nanok flags off machinery that will be used for the construction of a six-kilometre road in the region yesterday. Kenya has lined up a number of projects that it hopes to boost business environment.

basa. Construction, operation and maintenance of a railway line proposed to connect Jomo Kenyatta Airport and Nairobi city centre is also lined up. In energy, the government will work with the private sector to develop up to 4,660 MW of power from geothermal, solar and coal in the next 25 years.

In tourism, a marina will be held at the Coast, a first class hotel at the Bomas of Kenya and conference centres in Mombasa.

Separately, the Kenya Urban Roads Authority invited bids for 40 projects involving the setting up, running and maintenance of roads in different urban centres and municipalities.

Implementation of the plans is expected to yield good fortunes for the local construction sector and result in creation of jobs for thousands of youths.

As part of the government's plans to help create jobs, the Ministry of Education, Science and Technology has invited bids for the construction of 60 technical training institutes across the country. This project is fully funded by the government.

Officials count on cold weather to warm up tea prices

BY NATION REPORTER

Tea prices are still depressed making the first half of the year one of the worst performing for Kenya's top forex earner.

Statistics by regulator, the Tea Board of Kenya, said the average auction price in June 2014 was $2.03 a kilogramme against $2.44 for the corresponding period last year.

The average price for the first six months in 2014 dropped by 20 per cent to $2.24 a kilogramme against $2.80 recorded over a similar period last year. During the month, 35.4 million kilogrammes were sold at the Mombasa auction against 27.9 million kilogrammes sold in June last year.

However, persistent cold weather and poor rainfall dampened production in tea-growing areas west of the Rift Valley where output decreased from 22.0 million kilogrammes recorded in June 2013 to 20.6 million kilogrammes.

The drop was largely in Kericho, Bomet, Kisii, and Nakuru counties.

Plantation volumes fell while small holder growers continued to increase output.

"Average production for the first half of the year was 0.19 per cent lower from 225.6 million kilogrammes recorded during the corresponding period of 2013 to 225.1 million kilogrammes," the board said in a statement yesterday.

Officials, however, hope that the current cold spell in main tea growing regions could trigger an improvement in prices while boosting demand for the beverage. Tea production for the month of June was 31.9 million kilogrammes, against 30.5 million kilogrammes recorded during the corresponding month of 2013. The marginal increase in production was largely attributed to occasional light rainfall condition which was experienced in the east of Rift Valley following which the region's output rose from 8.4 million kilogrammes to 11.3 million kilogrammes.

Egypt is still the leading export destination for Kenyan tea accounting for 9.9 million kilogrammes accounting for 23 per cent of the total volume.

FARMING

East Africa stares at maize shortage

An acute maize shortage is anticipated in East Africa following a disease that is slowly spreading and depressing yields. According to Ms Ann Wagai, a chief scientist and plant neurologist at the Kenya Agriculture Research Institute, maize sciosis has been reported in Tanzania, Uganda, Rwanda and South Sudan. Speaking during a two-day conference in Nakuru, Ms Wagai admitted that the disease is more severe this year than it has been in the past.

PRIVATISATION

Cane growers warn against sale of mills

Sugarcane farmers from Western Kenya yesterday warned county governments against plans to privatise sugar factories. Growers from Muhoroni, Chemelil and Sony sugar said there were serious handicaps that should be sorted out before selling the factories. Muhoroni Sugarcane growers chairman Felix Minda said more than 10,000 farmers in the sugar-belt had petitioned the Senate to spearhead the revival and that the process was complex.

AGRICULTURE

Give us more cash, plead grain farmers

Grain farmers in Rift Valley have urged the government to allocate more funds to them for disease control and to cover against losses caused by natural calamities. Growers yesterday asked for a higher budget 10 per cent from the current three per cent to tackle factors that have lowered yields. "Inadequate funding makes it difficult to urgently resolve disease outbreak and cushion farmers from losses caused by floods or drought," Mr Kipkorir Menjo Kenya Farmers Association director said during a meeting in Eldoret.

POWER

Forum to address green energy use

Leaders in renewable energy sector from across East Africa will on October 31 meet in Tanzania to discuss use of the resources. According to a statement from EAC secretariat yesterday, participants are expected to come up with a road-map for action by public and private sectors to hasten adoption of the energy. Renewable power sources such as geothermal, solar and wind are increasingly being favoured by the government to boost Kenya's power generation capacity.

VACANCY ANNOUNCEMENT

Established in 1984 by volunteer doctors and nurses, International Medical Corps (IMC) is a private, voluntary, nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization. Its mission is to improve quality of life through interventions that build local capacity in underserved communities worldwide.

IMC has operated in Somalia since 1991, implementing programs that build local capacity while serving the immediate health; nutrition; water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH), and livelihood needs of the most vulnerable. IMC is currently operational in seven regions across south-central Somalia and Somaliland, providing primary and secondary healthcare services, preventive and therapeutic nutrition support, and WASH assistance to internally displaced persons and other vulnerable groups that are unable to meet their basic needs without external assistance.

Job Title:	Grants and Donor Compliance Officer

Job Summary:

The GDC Officer will be responsible for liaising with donors, the IMC Somalia country team and the East Africa Desk and Grants and Contracts Management at headquarters on all matters related to award compliance throughout the grant cycle (for both cash and in-kind awards). His/her responsibilities will include ensuring the timely fulfillment of all internal and external reporting requirements and maintaining systems to track the same. The GCD Officer must be flexible and willing to engage in a wide range of tasks, including the facilitation of grant start-up/operational meetings and training field staff on grant-cycle management.

Key Responsibilities and Accountabilities

Grant Compliance and Management

- Coordinate with the field mission and HQ to ensure donor compliance, including with regards to implementation timeframes, procurement conditions, expenditure eligibility, reporting requirements, budget amendments, cost and no cost extensions, and so on.
- Develop and maintain systems for tracking and promoting compliance across all relevant departments and staff involved in the grant management cycle.
- Provide checklists and regular reminders on grant compliance requirements in organized manner
- Prepare memoranda of understanding, sub-awards, and other similar documents with government bodies, partner NGOs, and other relevant bodies, as necessary
- Organize and facilitate grant initiation/opening meetings to foster a coordinated start up; coordinate grant review, grant closure & evaluation/reflection session to have smooth transition.
- In consultation with the M&E Coordinator, ensure updated grant monitoring tools are produced for each new grant received.
- Assist finance to develop/refine a tool for use by program managers to systematically manage budgets and track spending
- Train program managers and other field staff on grant compliance

Reporting and Documentation

- Monitor the timely submission of internal reports by program managers; coordinate the review of and feedback on reports by relevant mission staff; follow up on outstanding reports and report non-compliance to relevant line manager.
- Closely monitor donor reporting requirements and liaise with the relevant field mission and HQ staff in timely preparation, compilation, and submission of reports.
- Maintain an organized grant filing system (soft and hard copies) to ensure relevant documentation pertaining to all grants is centrally filed, and copies made available to pertinent departments and staff involved in the management of the grant, as relevant.
- Establish and maintain an organized electronic filing system of internal and external program reports
- Work with field teams to document programmatic successes and lessons learned; coordinate with HQ to produce information products for internal and external distribution

Other:

- Be an active member of IMC's program team; participating in appropriate staff meetings, planning sessions and ongoing-liaising as needed.
- Represent IMC at coordination meetings, when assigned or delegated by line manager
- Participate in program planning, budgeting and involve in the preparation of concept notes and proposal formulation or other duties when requested by the DCD or CD

Qualifications and Experience

- Qualified candidates will possess the following:
- A university degree, preferably related to health, humanitarian assistance, international development, or a related field
  - A minimum of five years of relevant professional experience, preferably in grants management.
  - Demonstrated capacity to think critically, solve complex problems, and orally articulate in a clear and concise manner (*Note, this is fundamental to the position and will be tested as part of the recruitment process)
  - Proven capacity to communicate clearly and effectively in written English; (*Note, this is fundamental to the position and will be tested as part of the recruitment process)
  - Strong organizational skills.

Enhanced Ndakaini half marathon primed for more runners

BY BRIAN YONGA
byonga@ke.nationmedia.com

The 2014 Ndakaini Half Marathon will for the first time introduce timing chips to arrest any cheating by runners.

According to organisers, the chips on each runner's number will be able to be transmitted live through the Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) technology that will be in use on the day of the marathon.

Apart from curbing cheating, the technology will be able to record the correct timings for each athlete as per the IAAF standards.

The 11th edition of the race is set to be held on September 13 and registration has already begun and will end on September 7.

Elite runners are expected to grace the event whose main purpose is to conserve the Ndakaini Dam that supplies water to one million people in Nairobi. Each runner will register with Kshs 1,000. Registration can take place online, a first for the race in its decade-long history.

Cash prize increased

Speaking during the registration launch yesterday at the UAP offices, in Upper Hill, the company's Managing Director, James Wambugu revealed that the cash prize for this year's event had been increased to Sh1.3 million.

The winners of the half marathon men and women races will bag Sh200,000 each up from Sh150,000 last year. The 10 km race will see winners walk away with Sh30,000 while the 5km adult race will have a cash prize of Sh5,000 for the winner.

Wambugu noted that the automation of the marathon would increase the number of participants this year and make it more prestigious.

ATHLETICS AGENDA

Marakech offers tougher test for Kenyan athletes

After winning 10 gold, 10 silver and 5 bronze medals at the Commonwealth Games in Glasgow last week, our focus turns to the 19th Africa Athletics Championships scheduled for August 10-14 in Marakech, Morocco.

Unlike the previous continental championships, where we have been represented by the 'B' class athletes, I am happy this time we will have some of our best runners gracing the event.

And while we dominated the middle and long distance races at the Commonwealth Games, Africa Championships will no doubt pose a bit of a challenge. In Marakech, we confront our arch-rivals Ethiopia.

I am sure they have been in training and will no doubt capitalise on our fatigue after Glasgow to show us what they are made of. But knowing Kenyans, Glasgow just acted as an inspiration and I am sure we will be the team to beat in Morocco.

It is a chance for us to rectify some of the mistakes in Glasgow, where we allowed our neighbours Uganda to run away with the 10,000m gold medal.

Ethiopia in the mix

I am sure the 25-lap event will be even more challenging this time with the Ethiopians also in the mix.

I just hope Kenya's Josphat Bett will be careful this time not to engage in photo-finish drama, which gifted Uganda's Moses Kipsiro the gold medal in Glasgow.

Ethiopians seem to be overtaking us in the women's steeplechase and we will have to tread carefully just to prove to them that the production line in Kenya is still very much functioning.

There is equally no guarantee in the women's 10,000m where we continue to blow hot and cold and the men and women's 5,000m. Without the world record holder David Rudisha in the 800m, the race could be anyone's game even though I believe Kenya's Ferguson Rotich will be seeking to revive himself.

Our performance at the Africa championships will give an indication of how well we are prepared for the World Championships next year in Beijing. Besides Ethiopians, our Ugandan brothers are also becoming stubborn and even in Morocco.

Our very own Julius Yego will also have a challenge in javelin with Egyptian Ihab Al Sayed Abdelrahman out to prove a point.

The Egyptian achieved a personal best of 89.21 in May this year during the Shanghai Grand Prix and will be seeking more glory. In the last championships in Porto Novo, Benin, Kenya finished second with 9 gold, 9 silver and 9 bronze medals. I wish them an even better performance in Marakech.

Wafula, Tahir take charge at junior strokeplay contest

But ladies' champion heads the overall leaderboard after firing exciting one over par

BY LARRY NGALA
ngala@ke.nationmedia.com

Nyali's Tahir Mohammed playing off handicap four yesterday shot five over par 76 for three rounds total of 225, to maintain his lead among the boys in the 2014 Kenya Junior Amateur Strokeplay Championship at Muthaiga Golf Club yesterday.

He was however joined at the top by ladies champion Naomi Wafula who fired an impressive one over par 72 to take over the overall leaderboard and assured herself of the ladies' title and possible the overall nett.

Also firing one over par 72 was another Nyali junior Mathew Wahome who eventually moved to third place with 229 and in contention for the boys title.

Following Wahome was Adel Balala on 131 after posting 81. He was eight shots better than Royal Nairobi's Karl Gatiramu.

The 72 hole championship comes to an end this morning with the fourth and final round at the same venue which yesterday also hosted a huge field during the Orange Kenya sponsored Club Nite. The juniors will this weekend join their senior colleagues for the Kabete Open at Vet Lab Sports Club.

Elsewhere, Tiger Woods was nowhere to be seen Tuesday at the PGA Championship, except for his image on promotional banners, and his status for today's scheduled start at Valhalla remained uncertain.

Former world number one Woods, a 14-time major champion chasing the record 18 majors won by Jack Nicklaus, suffered a back injury Sunday during his final round at the World Golf Championships event in Akron, Ohio.

Underwent back surgery

Woods, who underwent back surgery March 31 to ease a pinched nerve, returned in late June and missed the cut at a PGA event his foundation owns, then shared 69th, his career worst 72-hole major showing, at last month's British Open.

Woods has not finished 72 holes in a US event this year without pain, going the distance only at Doral in March with a final-round 78 when he struggled to bend a collected his ball from the cup and grimaced at times after shots.

It's a far cry from the level Woods played in the 2000 PGA Championship at Valhalla, when he beat Bob May in a playoff to win the third leg of what would be four major titles in a row — the "Tiger Slam."

From his record-shattering first major title at the 1997 Masters to his most recent major crown at the 2008 US Open Woods has attracted fans beyond golf devotees to the sport.

Cheptil pip volleyball defending champs Hospital Hill

BY TITUS MAERO

Fireworks erupted as last year's boys volleyball national runners-up Cheptil from Nakuru beat defending champions Metropolitan's Hospital Hill 3-2 in a fiercely contested preliminary match in the ongoing Airtel Rising Stars Secondary Schools Term 2B National Games in Kakamega.

The skilful Cheptil, coached by Bitok Kiplagat, laboured to win the first set 25-22 courtesy of impressive attacks from Maxwell Ekonoit.

They then clinched the second set 25-23 but Hospital Hill, coached by Francis Mwangi, recovered to deliver their first set 25-22.

Hospital Hill's superb blocks from Samuel Kiplagat saw them take the fourth contest 25-23 to force the decisive fifth set.

Cheptil, propelled by attacker Elisha Kipkosgei and Samuel Kipkorir, put up a spirited display to prevail 16-14.

Cheptil first came into the National limelight when they first won the Kenya title in 2007 and repeated the feat in 2009.

Hospital Hill have clinched the national title once in 2013.

"The boys played well and according to the instructions I gave them.

Some bit of uncoordinated formations on the court cost us the much needed points, but we shall remain focused as we wind up the preliminary matches today," Hospital Hills coach Francis Mwangi told Daily Nation Sports.

His Cheptil counterpart Bitok Kiplagat was elated at his team's victory.

Cheptil's victory over Hospital Hill in their decisive volleyball third set but noted that the battle was still on. He said no team in the competition should be underrated. "All teams are strong and we shall face each game as it comes," Kiplagat said after the match. Both teams play their last Pool B preliminary matches today. The ties will determine how teams match up in the semi-finals on Friday.

Third place play-off and final will held on Saturday.

In another Pool B match, Lake's Pe-hill hammered Garissa from Garissa 3-0. The victor's attackers Joshua Odour and Stephen Obonyo helped their outfit to win the straight sets of 25-17, 25-25-21 and 25-20.

JMJ drawn in tough Copa finals pool

BY ABDULRAHMAN SHERIFF
asheriff@ke.nationmedia.com

Defending COPA Coca-Cola champions, JMJ Academy have been drawn in a tough Group B in this year's national COPA Coca-Cola Youth football competition to be held in Nairobi from Monday.

The group also contains strong contenders, Western region giants Murhanda Youth and new Coast region champions Tana Boys.

JMJ, who won last year's final after beating Kisumu Lakers 3-1 in the final, will also face other tough opponents, Angaza Boys from Central Region.

JMJ made their way to the national finals to defend their crown after beating off the challenge of Makadara Juniors in the Nairobi regional play-offs.

Last year's losing finalists, Kisumu Lakers were drawn in Group A with Rift Valley's Kitale Youth, Young Muslims from North Eastern and Eastern's Tharaka Stars.

In the girls' category, Nairobi duo Beijing Raiders and Kibra Queens were paired together in Group A. New Western regional champions, Shinyalu Girls also landed in the same group with Rift's Cherangani Starlets the fourth member.

Beijing and Kibra will be favourites to top the group but Shinyalu Girls are the dark horses and could register surprise results.

Lake region's representatives crush poor Waberi 6-0 with hat trick from tricky Swaleh revealing their intentions

Lake Region representatives Kisumu Day High School yesterday became the first team to advance to the semi-finals at the Airtel Rising Stars Term 2B games entered Day Two at Kakamega High School.

Kisumu Day crushed Waberi of Northern region 6-0. Mohammed Swaleh was outstanding throughout the match, his hat trick adding on to Lameck Atek, Tsuma Said and Ronal Elvis's goals that put the lake region team on a good course to clinch the national title.

Kisumu Day, who are making their first appearance at the high school finals since 2007, won their opening match 2-0 against Green Palms yesterday before confirming it with yesterday's huge win to top their Pool and continue with their challenge for a ticket to the East Africa School Games to be held in Dar es Salaam later this month.

Kisumu Day head coach Dan Otieno was delighted with the win, and warned their opponents that they will not slacken in their ambition to clinch this year's national title.

"I am happy that the boys have been very aggressive and we are yet to concede against our opponents. The semi-finals stage is very competitive but we will make sure we maintain this good momentum," he said.

The other Pool A match between Green Palms and Passenga from Aberdares regions was marred by ugly scenes after fans invaded the pitch for what they felt was biased officiating.

The Coast region team had two first half goals disallowed for offside. In the 48th minute the Passenga goalkeeper conceded an own goal while trying to punch out a shot from Green Palms striker, but the referee also disallowed this even as the Green Palms team ran out to celebrate, prompting fans to confront the centre referee aggressively over the officiating.

"It is very unfortunate when such things happen because the same is also duplicated in the national competitions," Green palms head Coach Swaleh Sunda said.

I am happy that the boys have been very aggressive and we are yet to concede against our opponents. The semi-finals stage is very competitive but we will make sure we maintain this good momentum"

Tusker went top of the Kenyan Premier League table after a 3-0 win over Top Fry Nakuru at the Ruaraka grounds yesterday. Goals from Ismael Dunga, Kevin Kimani and Jesse Were saw the brewers topple champions Gor Mahia from the summit of the table. Both teams are tied on 38 points but Tusker have a better goal difference. Top Fry missed a 15th minute penalty taken by Erastus Mwaniki and were made to rue their wastage as Tusker scored from the spot in the 41st minute to take the lead after Aboud Omar was brought down in the area. Dunga slotted the ball calmly past All Stars keeper Shaban Odhoji to give his team a half time lead. Tusker settled after shaky start and began creating chances with Kimani, Osborne Monday and Dunga constantly troubling the Top Fry defence with their sharp runs and good interplay. Tusker got their second goal in the 55th minute when Kimani lobbed the goalkeeper after being put through by Dunga. Were put the result beyond doubt when he fired a low shot to the far post.

Wrestling the league
Tusker Assistant coach Lawrence Odipo said his team would now work on maintaining top spot and wrestling the league back from Gor Mahia. “We are glad to be back on top of the table, but our aim is to win the league not stay on top for a few weeks. We will take a game at a time and hopefully come November we shall still be on top”, Odipo said. The match between AFC Leopards and Sony Sugar at Afraha stadium in Nakuru was called off after the sugar millers failed to turn up. AFC Leopards attended the mandatory pre-match meeting but their opponents were no where to be seen. After 45 minutes centre referee Andrew Juma called off the match. In other matches Thika United blanked Sofapaka 2-0 in Machakos while Mathare edged out Bandari 1-0.

Leopards looks to grow huge fan base

BY JOHN ASHIHUNDU
jashihundu@ke.nationmedia.com

AFC Leopards have launched a strategic plan that will guide the club in attracting thousands of fans during their matches. According to the club's assistant secretary, Asava Kadima the reigning GOtv Shield champions plan to set up a sound and transparent financial system as well as coming up with a database of their fans. The club is also planning to give back the ownership of the club to its true fans through a countrywide membership recruitment drive. “We intend to set up a merchandise shop at Nyayo Stadium which is our home ground but our efforts to secure an office at the stadium have failed so far,” added Kadima.

Marketing team
We have a marketing team that will enable us communicate to our fans through social media and our official web site that will feed them on any updates concerning the club. We shall continue encouraging them to support the club,” Kadima added. An experienced marketing and sales expert, Joshua Ananda, who is also a friend of the club, is also giving advice on how Leopards can grow professionally. Ananda has suggested providing avenues for corporate organisation to associate with AFC.

CECAFA CLUB CHAMPIONSHIPS | K'Ogalo grouped with hosts APR, KCCA and Atletico

Kigali open way, here we come!

Kenyan giants Gor Mahia return to regional club football fete after 19 years

BY ISAAC SWILA
@IsaacSwila
iswila@ke.nationmedia.com

Kenyan glamour club Gor Mahia begin their quest for the Cecafa Kagame Cup tomorrow in Kigali, Rwanda aiming to go far in the elite regional club championship.

A squad of 20 players and the technical bench led by outgoing coach Bobby Williamson jetted out yesterday morning aboard Rwanda Air to land in Kigali a few minutes past 11am ready for the rigorous two-week regional football extravaganza.

K'Ogalo have been prominent absentees from the annual eastern Africa tourney that brings together league champions of the region's countries.

Making a return after a 19-year absence will no doubt inspire them as they bid to win the title for the fourth time after their conquests in 1980, 1981 and 1985.

Though there is an enormous gulf between the all-conquering squad of the 1980s that brought glory and honour to the country by sweeping all before them including the 1987 African Cup popularly known as Mandela Cup now renamed Confederations Cup and the current average outfit, Gor still harbour hopes of going head-to-head with the region's best.

The Kenyan champions have been placed in Pool B alongside Rwanda giants APR, who gave them a 5-1 hiding in 2009 in a Confederation Cup preliminary round tie, Kampala Capital City Authority of Uganda, Atletico of Burundi and Djibouti's Telecom.

We are going there not just as a club but also to represent the nation and we must do our best to bring the honour and glory to the country”

Bobby Williamson, Gor Mahia coach

MARTINI MUKANGU | NATION

Gor Mahia players acknowledge their fans after their 2-2 Tusker Premier League draw with rivals AFC Leopards at Nyayo stadium on July 27. Gor safely arrived in Kigali yesterday for the two-week, 14-team Cecafa Club Championship.

In order to navigate past the group stage, K'Ogalo will need to play high speed football laced with tactical discipline.

Erratic first choice goalkeeper and skipper Jerim Onyango will also have to forget his schoolboy errors, the defense must be rock solid, midfield dynamic and the attack lethal.

The diminutive Dan Sserunkuma, who has over the past two seasons built a reputation of a lethal goal poacher, will once again be expected to lead K'Ogalo's frontline.

Second striker, youngster Timothy Otieno, who has shown much promise since bursting onto the big stage a month ago, will be reason enough for the Kenyan champions to relish their chances.

Speaking to Daily Nation Sport on Monday evening prior to the team's departure, head coach Bobby Williamson, 52, who has won four Cecafa Senior Challenge Cup titles with Uganda Cranes, stressed on the need of having a good outing.

“It's a major tournament and Gor is a big club; a big brand in this part of the world.

We are going there not just as a club but also to represent the nation and we must do our best to bring the honour and glory to the country,” he said.

“It will be a tough tournament but we will aim to do our best.” The 40th edition of the tourney has attracted 14 teams with Yanga, (Tanzania), Coffee (Ethiopia), Rayon Sports (Rwanda), Atlbara (South Sudan), and KMKM (Zanzibar) set to fight it out in Group A while defending champions Vital'O (Burundi), El Merreikh (Sudan), Police of Rwanda and Benadir (Somalia) are in group C.

The winner will be determined on August 24 at the 30,000-seater Amahoro National Stadium. Vital'O are the defending champions.

K'Ogalo begin hunt for Bobby replacement

BY NATION REPORTER
sportsdesks@ke.nationmedia.com

Gor Mahia have started the search for a new coach after the appointment of their man Bobby Williamson as manager of Kenya's Harambee Stars.

Gor Mahia chairman Ambrose Rachier yesterday said due to financial constraints the club was currently facing, they will have to go for a local tactician.

Rachier says the club will release the Scotsman to the national team after Gor Mahia returns from Rwanda where they will be participating in the East and Central Africa Club championships.

“We are going to let him go. We have had talks with the federation and seeing no reason in holding onto him. However, he remains part of the Gor Mahia family and we will be consulting him for some guidance,” Rachier said.

Asked who the club had in mind, Rachier said: “We are looking both locally and beyond Kenyan borders but you will have to agree that with the financial woes we are facing, we will have to settle for somebody we can afford and I don't think that person will be from abroad.”

Walked out on club

Williamson joined Gor Mahia in June last season replacing Croatian Zdravko Logarusic who walked out on the club after disagreeing on contractual issues.

The Scotsman was an instant hit guiding Gor Mahia to the Kenyan Premier League title for the first time in 18 years.

But when Football Kenya Federation offered him a chance early this week to handle Kenya following the sacking of Belgian Adel Amrouche after Harambee Stars' exit from the 2015 Africa Cup of Nations qualifiers, Williamson accepted the offer and he will be cutting short his contract with the Kenyan giants.

“It's an honour to coach the national team of Kenya and I had a talk with my employers Gor Mahia who gave me their blessings,” he said.

“I will still be at the club for the Kagame Cup and I hope we do well in the competition,” said Williamson.

“It will be an emotional exit from Gor Mahia because it has become my home. This is a great club with very passionate fans.”

Heavyweight powerlifter Wambui delight's in bronze

BY BRIAN YONGA
byonga@ke.nationmedia.com

Two more medallists from the recently concluded Commonwealth Games in Glasgow arrived in the country yesterday morning.

Stephen Chemlany, who won silver in the marathon, and Joyce Wambui Njunguna, who scooped bronze in powerlifting, arrived to a low key reception at the Jomo Kenyatta international Airport.

The duo nearly passed unnoticed since they were not wearing the Kenyan kit nor displaying their medals.

The two arrived at 6.10 am via Amsterdam along with the cycling team led by their captain David Kinja.

Chemlany was the first off the International Arrivals section looking tired as he pushed the trolley carrying his luggage. He was met by his family that included his brothers and uncles who appeared delighted to see him.

He expressed disappointment at failing to scoop the gold medal that many expected blaming the weather for his shortcomings.

He was overtaken five kilometres to the end of the 42km race by Australian Michael Shelley who went on to win the marathon to shock of the world and indeed Kenya.

Chemlany settled for silver after clocking 2:11:58. Defending champion John Kelai and Eric Ndiema all of whom arrive back with Chemlany sunk to fifth and sixth places, managing 2:12:41 and 2:13:44 respectively.

“The rains totally messed up and cost us victory, we began well but the minute the weather changed, we were doomed”, the 32 year old said.

He further said the preparations for the Club Games were not conducive especially the lack of training kits that was a problem for the whole team.

“I hope we can put this behind us and prepare well for the world Championship and also the Olympics”, he added.

Chemlany will now rest before he resumes training for two more races in New York and Delhi before the close of the year.

In contrast, Wambui was ecstatic after winning the country its first medal in powerlifting.

The Paralympian finished third in women's heavy weight.

Weighing 70.13kg, she recorded 70kg in the first attempt then 75kg in second attempt before 80kg in her third attempt to win the bronze medal in a cumulative 220.13kg.

“I was not expecting a medal but I thank God for working hard and it is a dream come true”, she said.

The 38-year-old mother of two is now focused on the 2016 Rio Olympics where she promises to scoop the gold medal.

Kenya won 10 gold, 10 silver and five bronze medals to finish ninth overall and third in Africa behind Nigeria and South Africa.

TRANSFER TALK

Barca table Sh1.5bn offer for Vermaelen

Barcelona have offered Arsenal £10m (Sh1.5 billion) for defender Thomas Vermaelen. The Belgium international's contract expires at the end of next season and he has also been targeted by Manchester United. The Belgian is understood to want a move from the Emirates after falling behind the big German centre half Per Mertesacker and French man Laurent Koscielny at the heart of the Gunners defense. Vermaelen found playing time had to come by last term and despite featuring for his country in the ended World Cup, he is yet to begin team training as he is sidelined with injury.

Origi surprised at Liverpool's interest

Liverpool's new signing Divock Origi has admitted he was surprised by the extent the club had tracked his career.

Origi played and scored at the World Cup for Belgium and completed a £10million (Sh 1.5 billion ) move to Liverpool last month before being loaned him back to Lille. "Liverpool followed me for a long time," Origi said in an interview with L'Equipe. "When I arrived in the offices there, they showed me cassettes of me in the Under-15s. Everyone knew me. I couldn't believe it. When I arrived, I was impressed. Steven Gerrard told me it was a shame that I wouldn't be there straight away as everyone was waiting impatiently for me."

Rummenigge: Reina to sign for Bayern

Spanish international goalkeeper Pepe Reina is set to sign for German champions Bayern Munich from English Premier League runners-up Liverpool, the buying club announced via Twitter on Tuesday. The 31-year-old — who spent last season on loan with Serie A outfit Napoli — is ready to join Bayern according to the club's president Karl-Heinz Rummenigge, who added he was just the type of goalkeeper they were looking for. Reina — who would be second choice behind German World Cup winning goalkeeper Manuel Neuer — is due to travel to Munich in the next few days to undergo a medical.

City target loan move on highly rated Falcao

Manchester City are targeting a loan move for Radamel Falcao, with the Sky Blues preferring a temporary deal due to Financial Fair Play. If they do secure Falcao, that could see Steven Jovetic then move to Juventus. The Colombian hit man is said to be unsettled at French side Monaco and the Citizens want to use the opportunity to pounce and tempt the highly rated forward with a move to the English Premier League. Though the centre-forward missed the 2014 World Cup, he has returned to action and scored for his side in the 1-0 win over Arsenal at the Emirates Cup.

Van Gaal is in for a shock, warns Rodgers

London

Liverpool manager Brendan Rodgers has warned his new Manchester United counterpart Louis van Gaal that the competitiveness of the Premier League will be like nothing he has experienced before.

Van Gaal has won titles in Holland, Spain and Germany and has made an impressive start to his United career, leading them to victory over Liverpool in the final of the International Champions Cup pre-season tournament.

But for all the 62-year-old's achievements, which include Champions League success with Ajax in 1995, Rodgers thinks that he will be in for a shock when the Premier League kicks off on August 16.

"I think what he'll find is the competition in this league will be different to any other league that he's worked in," Rodgers said, as reported by several British newspapers yesterday.

"In a lot of the other leagues, there are one or two teams and those are the teams that are expected to win. This is a league where the top team plays the bottom team and on any given day you can lose.

"You don't get that a lot in the other leagues. I think the competition will probably take him by (surprise), and that's from foreign managers I have spoken to over the years." (AFP)

FOOTBALL | Poll in France shows 81 percent believe Swedish striker will be top scorer again

History-chasing Ibrahimovic just can't stop scoring

He now lies sixth in PSG's list of all-time leading scorers, well on course to break record

Paris

It was business as usual for Zlatan Ibrahimovic as he scored both goals against Guingamp to win France's season-opening Champions Trophy for Paris Saint-Germain in Beijing last weekend.

One long-range thunderbolt and then a penalty had the Ligue 1 title-holders on the way to a 2-0 victory inside just 20 minutes, and gave the rest of France a glimpse of what could be to come in the season ahead.

In a poll in the popular sports daily L'Equipe this week, 81 percent of those asked believed PSG would win a third successive championship and 65 percent said that the Swedish striker would be the top scorer for the third year running.

Other world-class talents, such as Edinson Cavani, Radamel Falcao and James Rodriguez, have come, and in the latter's case, gone from France in the last two years, but none can rival Zlatan's personality on or off the field.

Spell trouble

His presence may spell trouble to PSG's rivals, but his importance to the overall image of a French game which struggles to generate the same level of interest as its English, Spanish or German counterparts cannot be underestimated.

With a total of 1.84 million, Ibrahimovic has more Twitter followers than any French club, PSG included, and PSG's Twitter homepage is emblazoned with a picture of the Swede celebrating a goal.

Speaking of goals, he has already rewritten records since arriving in France from AC Milan in 2012 and he is on course to keep on doing so in the campaign ahead.

In 2012-13, he became the first player to score 30 goals in a French top-flight season since Jean-Pierre Papin for Marseille in 1990 and he followed that with 26 goals in the last campaign, 10 more than any other player. Despite missing much of the latter stages of last season due to injury, he still mustered a total of 40 goals in all competitions, beating the previous individual club best of 39 set by Carlos Bianchi in 1978.

As a result, he already lies sixth in the capital club's list of all-time leading scorers, with 78. And if he keeps scoring at his present rate, he could overtake Pedro Pauleta's record tally of 109 this season.

"When I came to Paris, I said that I wanted to make history," said Ibrahimovic after beating Guingamp last weekend. "I am starting my third season here and we have already won five trophies.

"I still have a strong desire to win every match. We have written our names down in history and we continue to do so." He has already won nine league titles in spells in the Netherlands, Italy, Spain and France, but the main goal for 'Ibra' now must be to win the Champions League, a competition in which he has often failed to deliver in the biggest matches.

He will turn 33 in October, so there will not be many more chances for a player whose contract at the Parc des Princes runs through to 2016.

But he comes into this season seemingly more settled and fresh than ever before. Sweden's failure to qualify meant Zlatan did not take part at the World Cup, although he was still one of the last PSG players to report back for pre-season training.

But having declared that "a World Cup without me is nothing to watch", he did make it to Brazil and was spotted alongside PSG president Nasser Al-Khelaifi in the crowd. (AFP)

When I came to Paris, I said that I wanted to make history. I am starting my third season here and we have already won five trophies. I still have a strong desire to win every match. We have written our names down in history and we continue to do so”

Tough laws to tame boda bodas

Rules come as a result of a sharp increase in fatalities from motorcycle accidents

Boda Bodas will be fined Sh20,000 for flouting traffic laws under new safety regulations. The tough laws targeting owners, riders and passengers which came into effect on Saturday, prohibit boda boda from carrying more than one passenger.

The rules also require them to register with transport and safety committees in each county, and restrict their runs within specified counties. Those intending to change must first inform their county transport and safety committees.

The motorcyclists are not allowed into the Central Business District of any city or the centre of any town. They must also end their business after 11pm and must not start earlier than 5am.

National Transport and Safety Authority director-general Francis Meja told a press conference in Nairobi yesterday that the regulations were as a result of a sharp increase in fatalities from boda boda accidents.

Mr Meja said that by July 8, about

Boda bodas wait for passengers from vehicles impounded by the police during a traffic crackdown on the Nyeri-Nanyuki Road yesterday. Tough new laws targeting the motorcycle riders came into effect on Saturday.

231 people had died from boda boda accidents compared to 189 last year.

"While we have noted a significant drop in the number of deaths from passenger service vehicles, fatalities from boda boda accidents have been on a sharp increase," Mr Meja said.

He added that the rules would effectively curb the menace that has been rampant as the motorbikes flout traffic rules with wanton abandon.

They are known to carry excessive passengers, jump traffic lights and ride with little regard for other road users.

There are several cases where they ride on the wrong side of the road and are reputed for ganging up against other motorists when one of them is involved in an accident.

"Some of them ride dangerously with no protective gear, helmet or reflective jackets," the transport authority director noted.

The new rules place responsibility on motorcycle owners, riders and passengers, who also risk imprisonment for six months.

A passenger must now demand a reflective jacket and helmet to avoid being arrested. Owners must ensure

THE GOVERNMENT HAS invited private investors to put up 10,000 housing units in Nairobi for its lower cadre civil servants.

The low-cost units will be built in Park Road, Starehe, under a public private partnership model, with the government providing the land.

Under the government home ownership scheme, the workers, who include clerks, secretaries and office assistants, will pay a 10 per cent deposit, and the remainder in installments of between Sh2,000 and Sh4,000.

The government is working on a resettlement plan for those living on the targeted 500 hectares.

Construction will take about three years while repayment for the houses will take up to 18 years, with one unit estimated to cost about Sh800,000.

This is the first phase of a government plan to provide 300,000 housing units to civil servants across the country.

Property owners might be charged development fees

PROPERTY OWNERS will part with development fees for three transactions if the Physical Planning Bill becomes law.

The law will give county government powers to charge the fee on those applying for change of use, change in plot ratio and subdivision of land. The rate is left to the discretion of the county.

The Bill says that the money charged will be put in a special fund and used to develop county infrastructure and provide basic services.

Waiver of the fee will mean that the applicant will be required to provide some public infrastructure for use by the area residents.

School's out so it's time to make

The August holiday is with us, and the children will be spending more time at home. They will be inviting friends over to play, watch telly or do assignments. To cater for these activities, you will probably have to make some changes to the living room. Here's how to go about it

BY IMMACULATE WAIRIMU
immawairimu@yahoo.com

It's August. Some schools have closed. Others will soon follow. This means that children will be spending more time at home for the month.

With children either in school for most of the day or in boarding schools for three months, the holidays present the perfect time for them to relax and bond with their families.

Much of this relaxation and catching up takes place in the living room, when their parents are back from work or on weekends. This means the living room will no longer be strictly a formal space. It will also be used as a meeting point for the children and their families and friends. It will be an entertainment spot and a play area for the younger ones. As a result, there will be a variety of activities in it, which might require some décor changes.

This presents a challenge for parents to design the living room in a way that accommodates their preferences and style with that of the play needs and ages of children. It is not practical to expect them to play outside all day long.

Depending on the ages of the children, the parents will have to consider the likelihood of staining, and the need to protect the young ones from electrocution and other dangers related to electricity, slips and falls, and burns or scalds. It is also about playing around with spacing to accommodate the smaller children who want to invite their friends over to play or hang out.

Although the older children's preferences might not be difficult to incorporate, they will also need to be factored in as they too will want to impress their friends when they invite them over for games, movies and sleepovers.

The parents might also invite their children's cousins and relatives to spend the holidays with them. This will require the creation of additional space to accommodate them.

The challenge is to create a casual, comfortable and well-decorated space that is practical and also stylish by using durable and washable fabrics, sturdy furniture, attractive colours, and creating plenty of storage space for toys and other accessories.

Below are some ideas to help you make the living room more livable, enjoyable and relaxing, and child-friendly without compromising on its style. The ideas will also be easy to alter when the children go back to school.

The furniture

Comfort and style sets the mood for the time that will be spent in the living room. Therefore, the furniture should balance family-friendly with sophistication. This is achieved by including variety in colour, shapes, sizes and patterns.

Comfortable couches will be ideal for lounging, so that family members can make themselves comfortable while catching up, sitting, lying or even cuddling.

The couches can be accessorised with ottomans to create more sitting space when one wants to raise their legs for relaxation. Side tables can be added. On them, healthy soft drinks or snacks can be placed when the family is relaxing while watching TV.

A side table will also make a great addition to the couch when Dad wants to relax while reading his newspaper, and needs a place for his drink. The same can work for the teenage daughter who wants to read her magazines and have somewhere to place her phone. She will need it nearby to update her friends on Facebook,

Semi-detached unit sales in 6.7 pc growth

IMPROVED RETURNS from renting out semi-detached units saw the sales of these houses rise by 6.7 per cent in the first six months of the year, as more people buy to rent them out.

This compares favourably to the first half of 2013, when the units' prices grew by 0.1 per cent. In the second quarter alone, the prices rose by 3.3 per cent. Rents rose by 16 per cent.

The average sale price for the semi-detached units is Sh20.4 million in Nairobi.

Rents for apartments have also gone up by 8.2 per cent, but the selling price has risen by 1.5 per cent, with an apartment costing an average Sh12.7 million in Nairobi.

Meanwhile, prices for detached (standalone) houses have taken a 2.1 per cent dip and now sell for an average Sh35.2 million in Nairobi.

Buyers from this segment have opted to rent semi-detached units due to the high prices and account for some of the high rent growth in the semi-detached units.

The average mortgage rate fell from 17 per cent in the first quarter to 15.7 per cent in the second..

Lamu land titles for 22 companies revoked

The government has said that it has revoked the titles for 500,000 acres held by 22 companies in Lamu County.

This follows a special audit that revealed that the land was fraudulently acquired in 2011 and 2012.

The revocation was ordered by President Uhuru Kenyatta.

The Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission is also working to unmask those behind the 22 entities, with Lands Cabinet Secretary Charity Ngilu saying that prominent people may have used proxies to make the purchases.

On Monday, the National Land Commission published the dates on which the companies' representatives should appear before it and explain how they acquired the land.

home a kids' haven

WhatsUp, Twitter, etc.

When it comes to colours, bright hues appeal not just to children, but to adults as well, even though they tend to show the stains more.

For families with light-coloured furniture that is prone to showing dirt and stains, washable slipcovers will be useful. The furniture will look as good as new when the slipcover is no longer needed.

Meanwhile, those with dark-coloured furniture can create an airy and brighter look by pairing the dark furniture with bright and light-coloured accessories. One could include a transitional piece that will mark the move from dark to medium tone to light for a seamless look.

For instance, if the couches are a dark shade, the coffee table or the area rug could be a medium shade and the walls, curtains, and so on, could be a light shade to aid in the transitioning. The dark couch can also have throw pillows in light shades to achieve the same result and further enhance style.

This way, it will be easy to swap smaller accessories, such as paintings and other wall hangings like picture frames, mirrors, etc, and throw pillows, vases, table lamps, when a new colour scheme is desired.

One can also create a flexible seating arrangement that is anchored by the main pieces, such as the couch, but still with plenty of corners and open spaces to pull up extra chairs.

Also, be sure to add character to the room with personal knickknacks and family photos that represent every member of the family. Apart from character, this will create a sense of belonging that the children will be proud to show relatives and friends.

Paths and walkways

While working on the living room décor, remember to factor in the walking areas and traffic flow when arranging furniture. The room should have plenty of space for the younger children to play, an entertainment space for the older ones, with an arrangement that makes it easy for them to move easily from one area to the other, or in and out of the room.

For instance, it should be easy for them to move to the door and back without cutting through the main conversation area and inconveniencing others or tripping over the feet of those who are seated. It is also important to ensure that all free standing accessories, such as vases, individual seats, and tables, among others are away from the paths and walkways, and secured near a wall to prevent accidents. There will likely be a lot of running around the house.

Furniture placement and colour zoning

During the holiday, it is great to have the children feel the continuous presence of their parents around them, even while not engaging in activities together. This can be achieved through furniture and room placements, or colour transitioning from one room to the next.

Mummy might be working in the kitchen while dad is reading the newspaper in the lounge area, and the children are hanging out at the dining area doing their homework or engaging in another activity, yet they can still feel the presence of their parents.

For families without open-plan living spaces where togetherness is promoted, keeping distinct areas unified by the same colours throughout, or using furniture placement to divide the activity zones will have the same effect.

The entertainment centre

This will be where the children will spend much of their time in the house – watching more TV and movies and enjoying computer or video games. Be considerate and make their time here enjoyable for the weeks they will be relaxing at home.

Parents can integrate a media centre into the family/ living room, complete with storage room for controllers, game systems, and other components. Ensure the TV is at a safe level where the younger children cannot easily switch it on when you want them actively playing outside in the sun, and where they will not interrupt their older siblings or parents.

There are wall units that can stylishly hide the bulky cathode tube TVs and lock them in when not in use. And there are the wall mounts for flat panel TVs, along with the accompanying devices and DVDs. Shelves or cabinets for movies, video games and small electronics like video game consoles and DVD players will serve the purpose of hiding what is not necessary for use. They also help to maintain a neat, clutter-free living room. Better still, if one is able to, they can invest in a large entertainment centre for such times.

For a family room that comes alive at night, parents could consider painting the walls a dark hue or accessorising light walls with a dark-coloured curtain and area rug to make the room warmer and the favourite area for television viewing.

Coffee table

A central coffee table can serve many purposes in a family room. It can be a place to position popcorn bowls, drinks and remote controls for movie time, or act as the main hub for game boards during family game nights. The younger ones can also use the expansive surface for playing and colouring.

Study desk

As much as this is a time for relaxation, the children should not forget their studies. To encourage studying, parents could install a work table for homework time, away from the bustle of living room activities. This area, though part of the room, should face away from distractions.

If you want functional space, don't worry too much about appearance

New York Times

IF BRIAN AND JILL Faherty's home looks a little like a catalogue, there's a good reason. Faherty is the owner of Schoolhouse Electric & Supply Co, the lighting and housewares company based in Portland, Oregon, and his ranch-style house here is where most of the catalogues are shot.

But it's also where he tests products in development, and where he and his wife are raising three children (JP, 12; Greta, 11; and Audrey, six). So, while it may look as if everything is arranged just so, the opposite is, in fact, true. Things are constantly in flux, and function is more important than appearance.

The main piece of furniture in the family room, for instance, is an Ikea sofa.

"We added brass-walnut accented legs for a sleeker look," says Brian Faherty, 50. "We like to invest in some things for enduring quality, but a sectional couch with three kids? How long is that going to last before it has to be reupholstered?"

He adds: "We don't want to be worried about our couch. We live here."

Even the house was chosen for its utility, and for the ways in which it differed from their previous home, a colonial-style house with great bones but very small rooms.

As Jill Faherty, 44, a product developer for Schoolhouse Electric, says: "We had a 4,700-square-foot house, but we'd end up in the 150-square-foot TV room to be together."

Like many of the couple's products, their new 3,200-square-foot house has a midcentury foundation, but the design has been reimagined for modern life. In this case, that involved reconfiguring the layout of the 1958 house, which they bought in 2012 for $785,000 (Sh68.3 million), but retaining its footprint and the three brick fireplaces.

Ben Waechter, a local architect, created a family-friendly floor plan for them, with wide hallways, large windows and a central living space that combined the dining room, kitchen, home office and family room.

"They wanted a single-story house made of forms and materials that would transcend any idea of time or style," Waechter says. "Images of Swedish courtyard farmhouses came to mind."

The renovation, which was completed in only five months, cost about $500,000 (Sh43.5 million).

Although (or perhaps because) the new house has less space, Brian Faherty says, it functions better than the large house they gave up.

"We live in every square inch of this house," he says. "There's no wasted space at all."

And considering that "it's going by so fast with our kids," he says, what's even better is that "it's like the family lodge here. We get to see so much more of them."

With all that open space and an outdoor dining area framed by the house, you would think this would be a good place for parties, too. But the Fahertys, it seems, rarely entertain.

"As much as we think we'd love to," Jill Faherty says, "we really don't."

Brian Faherty objected: "We do entertain three kids every night, and often their friends."

Even so, the custom white-oak butcher block on the kitchen island is already showing signs of wear.

"It's not perfect, and we like it like that," Brian Faherty says. "We wanted a house that's durable, not fussy."

He adds: "Don't look in the garage."

A lot of time will be spent in the living room with the kids, so a couple of cushions will go a long way in helping everyone relax.

For a family room that comes alive at night, parents could consider painting the walls a dark hue or accessorising light walls with a dark-coloured curtain and area rug to make the room warmer and the favourite area for television viewing

Add a touch of class with glass

This clear or reflective material is fragile but versatile, and can thus be used in many ways to beautify spaces

BY DÉCOR JUNKIE

Despite the familiar caution that people living in glass houses should not throw stones, there is a lot to be said about the use of glass in home decorating.

Glass is fragile, but it is also a very versatile and reflective material that can be used in many ways around the home. All you need to do is mix functionality with creativity and use some glass to make your home even better. Here, a few ways to add a dash of style to your house using glass.

OPEN DOOR

Give glass a chance by starting at the very fore of your home – your front door. There are a number of glass artists who can help you make a customised glass mosaic that can be framed on a variety of wooden doors.

You can use a number of themes to create the mosaic. For instance, if you are a nature lover, the mosaic can be a large tree. And if you are very spiritual, then the mosaic could consist of a group of cherubs.

The mosaic can even be in the form of an abstract image of different pieces of coloured glass. The ideas are virtually inexhaustible, and the appeal here is that you get to add a stamp of your own to your front door.

TOP THAT

One of the most used pieces of furniture in the living room is the coffee table, so it needs some tender loving care and protection. A glass top over the wood to protect it from heat damage is not a bad idea.

Being reflective, a glass top will also make the room appear larger by increasing the amount of light. To make the top even more reflective, use a group of glass vases and metallic decorative balls to accessorise the table.

SEPARATE THINGS

In the bathroom, if you are short of space and you want a minimalist effect, then ditch your conventional shower curtain for a simple bespoke glass partition that can be stationary.

If you have the space and money, it can be in the form of frosted sliding glass doors that separate the shower area from the rest of the bathroom. To further echo the look of the frosted glass, you can fill some simple glass hurricane candle holders with different colours of soap flakes.

You make these by simply grating some pieces of soap and filling the candle holders with the pieces. To further complement the colours of the soap flakes, use matching block candles and bathroom linen, such as towels, to unify the look.

IN WRITING

You can also have a piece of glass mounted over your bed. To make the glass even more decorative, use vinyl text stickers, preferably in dark colours or metallic colours, to display some of your favourite quotes. This will give your room a romantic look – one that particularly goes well with mauve (moderate purple)

You can use a number of themes. For instance, if you are a nature lover, the mosaic can be a large tree. And if you are very spiritual, it can consist of a group of cherubs. There are a number of glass artists who can help you make customised mosaics walls, off-white bedroom linen and chocolate throws and cushions.

CHEERS

If you love to entertain guests, then for the next special occasion, you can take things up a notch higher by serving them using monogrammed glasses bearing their initials.

The glasses can be used as name cards, but can also be kept as keepsakes by your guests. There are a few local glass shops that specialise in doing this kind of printing on glass, and they are relatively inexpensive.

BOTTLED UP

If you are a wine lover, you can put your bottles of wine to good use by using them as centerpieces. To glam them up, simply buy metallic spray paint and have some DIY (do it yourself) fun by painting the bottles in all manner of ways.

To create different patterns, you can use strips of cello tape or rubber bands on the bottle to make them even more artistic.

Last but not least, why not use inexpensive but eye-catching textured glass plates all around your home to store candles in your bathroom, jewellery in your bedroom, potpourri in your toilet and even your keys in your living room?

Place antiques here and there for a vintage look

Use them selectively to create a theme and ensure that they blend in with the rest of the décor

The bedroom is no doubt the most intimate and most functional room in the house. That's because it's the place most people retreat to after a long day at work.

As a result, people are very particular when it comes to designing it, and many try to personalise the space.

According to Ms Rebecca Siwa, an interior designer with Ficuz Designs, one of the best ways to add that personal touch to the bedroom is through vintage décor.

"Vintage style is charmingly old-fashioned, affectionately cozy, and, at times, cheerfully upbeat," she says, adding, "The unique thing about vintage décor is that it goes contrary to modern décor trends. It appeals to those who enjoy having varnished console tables, or take pleasure in repurposed patios and chairs with no upholstery.

So, if you find old buildings exotic and anything old-fashioned generally appealing, have decoupage images as your wall hangings.

Adding that vintage décor has a great ability to bring out the serenity of a room. "Vintage bedrooms are all about maintaining peace and forging harmony between the old and new, so it is important to avoid clutter.

However, Ms Siwa notes, it is important to practise restraint, given that there is so much to choose from.

"The idea is to assemble the decor over time and not add every antique you come across," she says.

Theme

Ms Siwa says it is important to find a theme that suits your personality. This involves deciding on the colour schemes, devising a decorating theme, establishing your decorating motif and finding an inspiration.

"Inspiration can come from a specific period, an evocative artwork piece, like, say, the background of the Mona Lisa artwork, a vintage décor item (table, quilt, wallpaper) or even old school furniture."

This means that if you are a fan of liberation struggles, a sepia-toned wall hanging of freedom fighters would be a good focal point in your decorative theme. "This will create a feature wall and, to make it even more engaging, you can make a mosaic using remnants of wallpapers or fabrics to create a quilt-like pattern," she says.

Furniture and carpet

To begin with, using well-worn wooden furniture pieces such as a dressing table, bookcase or armoires create a vintage mood.

"For the bed, a statuesque iron or brass bed would be ideal, but if the budget allows, a four-poster bed of the same will fit in as the center piece," she suggests. In addition, antique or objects such as a carved wood wall clock or wind-up alarm clock, tiffany lamp, or antique fans and pots, will anchor your bedroom to the yesteryears. You can complete the look by having shapely mirrors or salvaged windows on the walls.

Then, instead of having sitting furniture in the bedroom, she says, get a footlocker, and instead of a bedside table, use a commode cabinets or old tea cart.

"The key thing is to be always on the lookout for any vintage furniture item and consider its aesthetic function for your bedroom," she points says. For instance, having faded oriental carpets or handmade rugs sets a good mood and also offers ageless appeal."

The look can be further enhanced with embossed tin tiles on the ceiling.

The walls and hangings

The choice of colour of these two determines the decorative objects you will acquire. It helps in creating backdrops that showcase your colour palette in complementary shades and accents.

"If you acquired the decorative objects before painting, the walls should be painted a colour that complements or blend with from the main fabric." If that's not the case, the fabric on the old furniture and wallpaper details should be updated to complement that of the walls.

Developers to face penalties for projects that exceed five years

BY A CORRESPONDENT

DEVELOPERS COULD face penalties for construction works that take more than five years, if the draft Physical Planning Bill sails through Parliament in its current form.

This is likely to affect those who do partial developments and use the completed sections to generate income to finance the construction of the remaining parts of the buildings. "Where an applicant is granted development permission for building works, that applicant shall complete those building works within five years after receiving the development permission," the Bill says.

"The planning authority might impose conditions or a fine to be prescribed in regulations on an applicant for development permission for building works where that applicant fails to complete the building works within five years," it adds.

This means that counties, which grant development permission, will be free to invoice those whose structures are incomplete after the prescribed period.

In many instances, loan-averse developers opt to build several floors, which they then put to use before ploughing back the income to complete the building. This usually takes several years.

The provision will also affect individual home owners who abandon the construction of their houses midway. Some have remained shells for many years.

The Bill further gives leeway to the planning authority to impose conditions on those who fail to begin work a year after they were granted development permission. If such a developer seeks an extension, he may face some unspecified conditions.

"Where the planning authority extends development permission, it may impose conditions on the applicant that it considers fit," the Bill states.

Development permission lapses after one year if the work has not started, necessitating an application for extension if the developer wishes to continue with the project.

The Bill also establishes the office of the Director-General of Physical Planning, who will be the chief government adviser on all matters relating to physical planning.

It also sets out the procedure for the development of national, regional, county and area physical development plans, which will be the policy guides for physical development in the respective areas.

EPS panels and containers the way to go

They are cheaper and faster to use, so more houses can be built in a short time

BY EVANS ONGWAE
eongwae@ke.nationmedia.com

The high costs of construction and finance have made housing unaffordable to low- and middle-income earners. However, people are coming up with some creative solutions, among them using shipping containers.

The interest in using containers to build homes was prompted by the need to remove hundreds of thousands of containers sitting in US and other ports around the world. Besides, they reduced cost of construction. By 2005, there were an estimated 700,000 in US ports alone due to the increase in imports from China.

But by the end of 2007, the stocks at US ports were reportedly down by about 25 per cent, and the interest being the strength and versatility of steel container homes, not the surplus or low cost.

After nearly three years of much publicity, hype and interest, the trend is growing. And it is not because of the US and global economy, but because these steel modules are strong, easy to use and versatile.

For instance, two university students in Washington used 18 shipping containers to build a four-storey apartment after demolishing the house that stood on the land. They realised that it was cheaper, and faster, to erect a building using the 8x40 foot boxes than build a brand new house.

Many such housing units are coming in some major towns in Kenya, especially Nairobi, which is experiencing and acute housing shortage.

In Kenya, containers are supplied by Almar Containers (East Africa), which has more than 25 years' experience in the business.

Meanwhile, the National Housing Corporation (NHC) is increasing the availability of low-cost housing materials through its expanded polystyrene (EPS) factory in Mavoko, Machakos County. The factory, established in May 2012, has an annual production capacity of 126,720 panels, which translates to 460,800 square metres of construction materials annually.

The factory is part of the NHC's vision to ensure that Kenyans are decently housed.

The EPS panels are considered suitable for construction because they are affordable, available, safe, and durable. They are as good as other construction materials, and even better in terms of construction speed.

The factory will contribute directly towards employment creation, especially when operating at full capacity, as well as indirectly through distributors, contractors and artisans.

EPS Technology will reduce the use of quarry stones/bricks, and to some extent, timber as well.

Mr Andrew Saisi, the general manager of the Mavoko factory, says EPS technology is a radical departure from traditional technologies, which, he notes, had enabled the NHC to build only 55,000 since 1953 (60 years). And this in a country with an annual demand of 200,000 houses, and in which other developers chip in with 50,000 units, leaving a deficit of about 150,000 units. This has fuelled the mushrooming of informal settlements, especially in urban areas.

Mr Saisi notes that persisting with the traditional method of using brick and mortar will not resolve the country's housing shortage, given the challenges faced this mode of construction faces.

And while using stones appears cheap, quarries do not produce enough since the process is labour-intensive.

To change the situation, NHC looked at how countries like South Africa, Morocco, Algeria, Egypt, Singapore and some European and North American countries had approached the housing challenge.

Mr Saisi cites the example of South Africa, which was able to put up a million houses between 1994 and 2004 (a decade). To-date, it has built more than two million houses using this technology – in a span of two decades.

Considering this remarkable success, NHC settled on EPS as the technology to help the country meet its housing needs.

Why?
"This technology is simple – akin to what the Maasai use to build manyattas," explained Mr. Saisi. "It takes just a day to erect an EPS wall once the foundation has been built."

He adds that, compared to traditional building technology, EPS offers cost savings of up to 30 per cent. Moreover, houses built using EPS are stronger than those built using stones.

The use of EPS panels is expected to reduce not just the construction period, but direct and indirect building costs.

The major advantages of using EPS panels are that construction is fast and economical, while providing a product that is superior to the traditional house.

With the establishment of its factory that produces the EPS panels, the National Housing Corporation (NHC) has moved to bridge the country's biting housing shortage. Using the Expanded Polystyrene (EPS) technology, the nation will be able to increase the housing stock within a short time.

Mr. Andrew Saisi, the General Manager in charge of the EPS factory says this technology offers the nation the opportunity to build more houses quickly and cheaply.

He said EPS represents a huge leap over traditional technologies, noting that, for example, NHC has managed to build 55,000 houses since 1953 (in 60 years), almost at the rate of 1,000 units annually. This, in a country with a current annual demand of 200,000 new houses and where other developers chip in with 50,000 units, leaves a huge deficit of about 150,000 units and has fuelled the mushrooming of informal settlements especially in urban areas.

Mr. Saisi points out that persisting with the traditional way of brick and mortar would not resolve the nation's housing shortage given the challenges faced when using this mode of construction.

Whereas using stones appears cheap, quarries do not produce enough of this material as the process is labour-intensive.

To change the situation, NHC looked at how countries like South Africa, Morocco, Algeria, Egypt, Singapore and others in Europe and North America had approached the housing challenge.

To reduce construction costs and time, it is necessary to standardize the materials and process.

Mr. Saisi cites the example of South Africa which was able to put up 1 million houses between 1994 and 2004 – in just a decade. To-date, it has built more than 2 million houses using this technology – in a span of two decades.

Considering such success, NHC settled on EPS as the technology to help the country meet its housing needs.

Why?
"This technology is simple – akin to what the Maasai use in building manyattas," explained Mr. Saisi. "It takes just a day to erect an EPS wall once the foundation has been built."

He adds that compared to traditional building technology, EPS offers cost savings of up to 30 per cent. Moreover, houses built using EPS are stronger than those built using stones.

The use of EPS panels as a substitute to traditional materials used in erecting walls, stairwells, floors and roofs is expected to reduce construction periods as well as direct and indirect building costs. Besides return on capital invested, building a house using the EPS panels will significantly take less time than when constructing using conventional materials such as stones.

The use of EPS panels enables the construction of residential and industrial premises using a construction system that replaces the traditional reinforced concrete and masonry in both horizontal and vertical parts that is, for roofing, walling and flooring. The major advantages of the EPS panel system are that construction is fast and economical while providing a building product that is superior in most respects to the traditional house.

To transfer this technology locally, there was need to establish a factory to produce and supply the required construction materials as there was no such factory in the country and the East and Central African region as a whole.

The potential for this technology is immense in the country especially among schools, universities and other institutions that need to house big populations.

The NHC's EPS factory in Mavoko, Machakos County, can produce panels to make 10 houses a day but has the capacity to double this number if there is demand.

YOUR STARS

AQUARIUS | JAN 21 - FEB 19

Since you has fought to bring a complex deal to completion you are entitled to object if others drag their heels. Make use of the change of energy provided by today's planetary set up to create shock waves that will bring an instant response.

PISCES | FEB 20 - MAR 20

There is a tense electric feel about this day. It wouldn't be a good idea to apply pressure to other people, otherwise they may just explode. It's likely that you will need to rest up this evening in order to recharge your batteries.

ARIES | MAR 21 - APR 20

Your imagination is certainly at its best, therefore, if you have a creative job, you will be doing exceptionally well. You are in a soft and sentimental move this evening to spend time with people who can ponder to this mood. You may be a little unpopular, but at least you will know where you stand.

Taurus | APR 21 - MAY 20

Some sort of team effort might show signs of being more successful than you expected. Although you're worst fears may be unfounded, you are still right to complain .. Today's planetary set up urges you to start calling the shots: does something until you get a favourable response.

GEMINI | MAY 21 - JUNE 21

Give everything you have got to an undertaking that others have deserted through lack of conviction. You know there is rarely a crisis for which a solution can't be found, by showing your optimistic streak; you will attract help and support. You will also lay a ghost that has been around far too long.

CANCER | JUN 22 - JULY 22

If you have fallen out with friends and acquaintances lately, you are now provided with an excellent couple of days for kissing and making up. Make sure that you do: always remember that the people we meet on the way up are often the same ones that we meet on the way down.

LEO | JULY 23 - AUG 22

The stars today nudge you into more enthusiastic plans. You want stimulating conversations, adventures, and a sense of unexpected at every moment. Everything may look slightly different in a couple of days.

VIRGO | AUG 23 - SEP 23

TKeep a few feelings or ideas under wrap, for the time being. This is not quite the time to be too upfront, decisive and energetic. Use this time to clear out any dusty corners of your life and try to see where you can discreetly reach better compromises or agreements with close partners.

LIBRA | SEP 24 - OCT 23

You will be more visible at work, so you cant really wind down very much for a while. However, you do need to give yourself the odd hour to examine your lifestyle and see where you can make in a good deal healthier. You will start in top gear and then decide to leave the boring chores to other people.

SCORPIO | OCT 24 - NOV 22

There are a good many demands on your time, mental energy and nervous system at the moment, so you need a laugh every so often. Nevertheless, you are coping better than you imagined possible. Being a critic, you tend to run yourself down.

SAGITTARIUS | NOV 23 - DEC 21

The stars will be to the area of your chart devoted to methods of transport, the mind and short distance travelling. Any of these could cause a certain amount of frustration, however, remember this will last for a couple of days only.

CAPRICORN | DEC 22 - JAN 20

The stars highlight matters related to your career, professional travelling and legal matters. If you are involved in litigation at the moment, you are likely to come through with a big smile on your face.

LOOKS & ESSENCE 7:30PM
Looks and essence is a telenovela that explores the issue of modern-day values. Set in the magnificent city of Rio de Janeiro, this modern and entertaining telenovela centers on Griselda, a tough, hard-working handywoman with a very well defined set of values. She managed to raise her small children on her own when her husband disappeared. Tensions rise after Griselda wins the lottery and people suddenly turn up, like her "dead" husband, Pereirinha, and her son's ex-wife.

My dream was interrupted by a sudden loud bang. My sleep came to an abrupt end. I heard voices in the other room.

"Pick up all those IDs," one female voice ordered.
"Search those coats."

I heard a man's voice saying, "These are the notorious thugs who have been terrorizing people in Kenya."

I rose from the bed and peeped into the other room. I saw Rock Mwamba. He was handcuffed and blood was oozing from his head. I also saw Madoa. One policeman held him by the hand. A female police officer was the one yelling orders to the others. I counted the cops. They were about five in total. I began trembling like a twig in a storm.

I tiptoed hurriedly and hid under the bed. I felt hard objects under my body. My heartbeat quickened. I thought my heart was going to explode soon. I heard the footsteps of the police officers as they entered the room where I was. They switched on the lights. They searched every nook and cranny of the room. Then they turned the bed upside down. Alas! I was exposed! I coiled myself in fear like a cornered snake. I found myself crying uncontrollably.

"What are you doing here?" the female officer asked.

She held me by the ankle and threw me aside like a piece of paper. It was as if they were more concerned with reaching the objects I had been lying on under the bed.

"My God! This place is full of arms!" she exclaimed.

"We've been looking for you for a long time, Okutoyi. Now we've got you."

Rock just stood there and stared, motionless. I was lifted up from the floor and held by the hand by another police officer. He held it in such a tight grip I thought he was going to break my hand. The police officers collected the rifles, pistols, rounds of ammunition and Rock's fake identification cards as well as other paraphernalia. The three of us were handcuffed and huddled out of Rock's den. We were tossed roughly into a police van waiting outside the building.

Pay yourself first in order to meet your wealth plan

THANK YOU, Ann, for your great work. I have a challenge on how to budget my income. I make Sh340,000 from my cleaning services business and out of it, I pay the following: workers Sh200,000, inputs (Sh12,000), rent (Sh13,500), tuition fees (Sh5,000), bills at home, (Sh28,500), chama (Sh5,000) and insurance Sh5,000. Although I'm supposed to pocket Sh50,000 after the expenses, I end up borrowing quite often. That be it as it may, I plan to save Sh100,000 for my son who will be joining Form One next year, besides buying a Sh10,000 education policy for my last born twins. I am also hoping to build a Sh1.5 million home on my plot. How do I achieve my goals?

— Paul M.

IT IS impressive that you have established a business which is the source of your income. Equally, it is notable that you are aware of your personal and business expenses. But with so many competing needs, it can be difficult to determine how to fix your savings plan.

However, for purposes of budgeting, it is important to separate personal finances from those of the business. Having separated the firm's income and expenses, then focus on your personal finance. For the business, your accountant should complete this task and forward to you an income statement commonly known as a profit and loss statement.

At the personal level, your income will take the form of a salary or share of profit also typically called dividend. From your account, it appears that you are paying yourself Sh50,000 salary per month. Believing that is the case, plan your personal finance using this amount. The starting point is to draw a budget. And using the budget, begin implementing your financial plan. This is the set of goals you have outlined above.

In a nutshell, while trying to achieve your savings goal, both long- and short-term, seek to apportion your 'must have' expenses at 50 per cent of your basic income. They include, rent, tuition fees, and bills at home. In the same breadth, try and limit your 'wants' to 30 per cent of your income while at least 20 per cent of your take home pay towards savings, servicing debts and chama contributions to help you build a good financial foundation.

Flexible spending

Such a budget will help you determine your expenditures. We recommend that you first subtract your recurring fixed expenses and your savings from your take home pay. This way, you will know the balance which you would channel to flexible spending — the 30 per cent allocation.

For better results, consider automating your savings plan. This ensures that you "pay yourself first". Through this, you are more likely to achieve all your savings goals without fail.

The budget allocation plan is a goal which you need to achieve first.

If you cannot reduce the cost of your necessities, then you should consider ways to increase your take home pay by boosting your business income, reducing the operating cost of the business as well as cutting your debt.

With your finances, it is better to do the hard work of budgeting and cutting down on your expenses on your own terms, rather than when a creditor is twisting your arm.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

I am Denis, 22, from Nakuru County. I have a host of business ideas which I have done research on. So far, I have narrowed down to establishing either a driving school, an insurance agency, an outdoor advertising outfit, property development firm or a transport business. However, putting down a business plan and getting the seed capital is giving me sleepless nights. I will be grateful for your help. Thank you in advance.

When you can't innovate a business idea, copy... here is how

IT IS not a secret that many people start their businesses by copying other businesses or business ideas. This is particularly common in Kenya where quite often, euphoria sweeps potential entrepreneurs to one business idea, they quickly saturate, and then begin checking out what someone else may be doing differently in order to copy once again. Remember the cyber cafes, chips joints, quails, simu ya jamii, M-Pesa agent, exhibition stalls, fish farming and what have you.

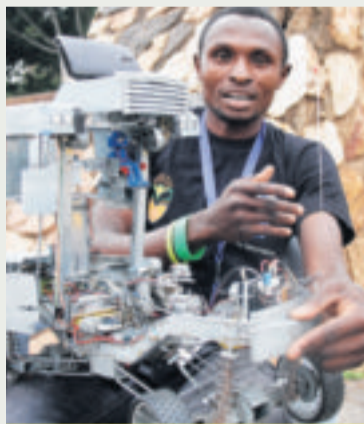

Here are some important questions to ask yourself. Is the most successful way to start and run a business copying an already successful business idea? Do you incorporate copies of successful ideas into your business? Do you think you should base your business products on what is already selling successfully in your target market? Should you base your business on how others trade in the market? Should you copy successful people? Do you copy successful people?

Get it right

While it is alright to copy business ideas, few people can ably copy the people who start these business ideas. This is what makes or breaks the success in copying business ideas. If you do not execute the idea well, the business could fail. That is why it is important to copy good business ideas as well as the people who run them. As long as the idea you are benchmarking or copying is working, begin to deeply look into how to run with it. Learn from those people who already seem to be getting it right.

Things to look out for when copying the business idea are: the products, customer service, marketing, customers and how the business is run.

FILE | NATION
Mr Peter Maina, a student at Technical University of Kenya explains how his robotic surveillance miniature vehicle works.

However, remember to copy the good parts only. When you identify weak parts, don't take them with you. Think on how to deal with the weak elements by building capacity to turn them into your startup's strengths. The very existence of a business similar to a business idea you have been grappling with is an indication that there is indeed a market and customers.

Recipe for success

After you have settled on copying the business idea, you now need to copy the faces behind it who are successful and more importantly, what they do. Try and figure what is their recipe for success. It is the little tips and hints that make a difference. You can't quite clone yourself into that business person who inspires you but you can try and work out some things in a way similar to theirs and certainly achieve a good measure of success.

To sustain the business idea you just copied, you can't simply keep copying everything. You will need to adapt it to the business environment which is constantly changing. You will also need to own it fully to be able to modify it as needed.

All in all, the best way to learn is from those who have succeeded in starting and running a business. Make a habit to keep examining what is working for successful business people, from their ideas to how they execute them. And, do not just sit and look at local business people, the Internet is awash with business case studies. Venture there, too.

MONEY AND YOUR RIGHTS &gt;&gt; WITH YVONNE KAWIRA

Online shop, Jumia, staff busy at work. The company noted that you did not complete your transaction.

Virtual shop Jumia has so far reversed the failed transaction

Dear Yvonne,
To say that I feel conned, is an understatement.

In late June, I tried making an online purchase from virtual retail platform, Jumia Kenya. But the transaction was not successful. As I write to you, I do not understand why the deal did not go through, however, my M-Pesa account was deducted Sh1,749 on June 24, this year.

Determined to find out what the problem was, I got in touch with the retail platform's customer care department and the staff assured me that my money would be refunded.

Unfortunately up to now, I have not received my money. Kindly, help me find out why this has been the case.

Thank you for your co-operation and assistance in advance.
— Kiteme

Hello Kiteme,
Thank you for your kind words and appreciating what we do to fight for our reader's money matters. We appreciate your taking time to lodge this complain over a transaction gone wrong.

We got in touch with the online shop you attempted purchasing a product from, Jumia Kenya, and we thank its team for handling this matter with the urgency it deserves.

In its response, Jumia noted that your transaction has since been reversed.

You see, when you select an item you intend to buy on Jumia website, you are given an option to choose your preferred mode of payment.

However, since in your case you were based outside Nairobi, the cash on delivery option could not apply.

You were therefore required to make payments in full through the other payment modes available on its website — M-Pesa, Airtel Money, Paypal, or Visa card.

You selected the M-Pesa option and proceeded with your transaction. However, Jumia noted that you failed to complete the purchase. The firm said, you were expected to fill in the transaction number on the website before you log out to allow the shop get notification of an order and therefore dispatch the consignment to you.

The team also informed us that it have been in communication with you explaining what needs to be done to fix the matter.

We hope that this information has been of help. Kindly keep us posted on what transpires going forward.

money problems with different organisations.

My name is Isige Andrew. My question is with regard to how the Higher Education Loans Board (HEL B) works. I am grateful that it financed my education until I graduated last year. And I am more than willing to comply by clearing my loan.

Kindly, find out on my behalf if Helb can waive my loan penalties for the time being since I am yet to get a job. I need to know in order to plan well for my personal finances.

Hello Isige,
Congratulations are in order for completing your tertiary education.

It is commendable that you are willing to service your loan to allow other students access similar financing from Helb.

And just as you requested, we got in touch with the learner's financier, Helb, with your request.

The organisation has requested you to send your national identity card number to enable it investigate your case, which you complied last week.

In its response, Helb noted that your loan matured in July this year. You are therefore expected to start servicing it without further delay.

However, since you noted that you are still unemployed, Helb has adjusted the minimum instalment amount.

Being under the category of its unemployed clients, as per the Helb policy, it is expected that you should pay a minimum instalment of Sh1,000 every month.

The financier also noted that your account has no penalties yet but the same will start piling this month, July 2014, in case you don't make any payments. We hope that this has shed light to you.

Feel free to write to us in future whenever you need assistance on this or any other matter.

JOB OPENINGS

People skills will see you rise in career

PEOPLE SKILLS. This is the ability to relate well with colleagues, seniors as well as customers in an office setting.

Just how skilled are you in this area?

Whether you are a team leader or a team player in an office setting, you need to know how to relate well and professionally with your workmates. And just as Ms Jacquelyn Smith of Forbes says, even when you are qualified for a particular job, fit to lead a team, or entitled to a promotion because you have extensive experience and highly developed technical skills, it's imperative that you also have great soft skills commonly known as "people skills."

Communication

Having strong communication skills is essential because it shows how easily you get along with the people you work with.

Do not be too silent or too loud. They have a name, and not a very impressive one, for both.

"If you have a gift for the spoken and written word, you will always put your best foot forward. Being articulate is highly prized in today's workplace, when time is at a premium and technology requires constant communication," she notes.

Tolerance

As you may have noticed, not everyone in your workplace has the same level of patience just as you. Some colleagues get irked quite easily while others will just take it all in without saying a word.

You therefore need to know how exactly to deal with these two personalities so you do not become a nuisance at the workplace.

Put the shoe on the other foot

While expressing yourself, whether verbally or non-verbally, it is often said that before uttering a word, one should ask themselves. "Is it true; is it fair, how would it feel if I was told the same?"

Trust

Ms Smith notes that you can only accelerate your career if you're trustworthy. "Without it, you can't get projects done or get cooperation," she notes.

It is comforting knowing that your boss can delegate a duty to you to run a particular task while he is away over and over again. When you achieve it, and successfully so, without supervision, then you are on the right track.

Listening

We cannot control what we hear but we can definitely control what we listen. It is polite to take turns in a conversation and knowing when it is your turn to be quiet, nod politely and listen.

Negotiation skills

Negotiations help attain an equal ground for both parties. Talks ensure that everyone's interests are taken into consideration without favour or intimidation. Enhance your communication skills at the workplace.

How investors have lost billion

To exit or not, that could be the question in the mouths of many shareholders as key stocks decline sharply in turn shrinking their wealth

BY JOSHUA MASINDE

Building your portfolio of shares can be both fun and rewarding. However, it has been an upsetting ride for some investors in the Nairobi Securities Exchange in the last one year.

While some stocks registered decent upswings, some have been outright disappointment. To exit or not, that could be the question for now. Take for instance, within a week, Mumias Sugar and Home Afrika's share prices sank twice to 52-week lows. Home Afrika's share at Sh3.2 a piece as at the end of last week has dropped from Sh25 listing price on July 15, last year.

In July alone, the decline in the share prices of CIC Insurance, KenGen, Olympia Capital and Kapchorua Tea was also in double digits, courtesy of under-performance and/or tough conditions in respective industries.

Mumias and Home Afrika led the worst performers' pack in July, touching fresh lows and sending jitters among investors. The property firm, the only listed company in the Growth Enterprise Market Segment, lost 23.9 per cent, the highest in the month, to settle at Sh3.35. In the last year, its share price has led the losers band shedding 43.2 per cent in value.

Mumias' share price lost 17.2 percentage points in July to settle at Sh2.4 becoming the second worst performer in the period. In the last one year, the counter lost 26.2 per cent.

CIC Insurance claimed third place in the losers' spectrum, shedding 16.6 per cent in July to settle at Sh8.3. In the year to July, the counter lost 39.5 per cent claiming top spot among the top 10 losers in the period.

Electricity producer, KenGen, declined by 15.2 per cent in July to Sh9.2 a unit, but the year-to-date decline is much bigger, at 32.1 per cent.

Building materials' maker, Olympia Capital, saw its share price decline in July by 13.3 per cent to Sh4.9 a piece. It lost 6.5 per cent in the year-to-date.

TransCentury, Longhorn Publishers and Kenya Re were also among the top 10 biggest losers with single digit share slump in July. However, these firms share prices plummeted by double digits in the last one year, also affected by the dynamics in their lines of business.

In the last one year, TransCentury's share price shed 20 per cent to Sh23 per share at the end of July. Longhorn lost 18.5 per cent in the last one year to settle at Sh16 per share while Kenya Re followed closely, declining by 16.5 per cent.

Other counters whose share prices have declined significantly are Eveready, Uchumi and Kenya Airways.

TAKING STOCK

The worst hit counters at the bourse

■ Home Afrika: Has seen its share price tumble to Sh3.35 from listing price of Sh12 in July 15, 2013. It has shed 43.2 per cent in the last one year.

■ CIC Insurance: In the year to July, the counter lost 39.5 per cent to trade at Sh8.3.

■ KenGen: Has declined by 32.1 per cent in the year to July to trade at Sh9.2 a unit.

■ Mumias Sugar: In the last one year, the counter has lost 26.2 per cent in value to settle at Sh2.4 a piece.

■ Olympia Capital: Has lost 6.5 per cent in the year-to-date.

While some counters declined significantly due to the seasonal factors associated with the earnings cycle, analysts say, the drop in Home Afrika, Mumias, Kenya Airways, Uchumi, and Eveready is driven by industry-specific woes.

Kakuzi, Portland cement, Carbacid, Scangroup and TPS East Africa have also experienced significant drop in their share prices.

"Some counters are victims of market cycles driven by performance in the banking sector, where demand for stocks has shifted," Mr Samuel Gichohi, a business development manager at NIC Securities, said.

For instance, Kapchorua Tea is a very liquid counter whose performance can be driven by even a small trade, he notes. However, free-falling Mumias and Home Afrika's shares are due to negative investor sentiments. Investors continue to remain nervous about Mumias' management woes, debts to banks and farmers, sugar hoarding, cane theft, high cost of production, and a harsh environment. Some analysts also fear the firm may be suspended from trading should the share price decline further. On Wednesday last week, the counter “Mumias Sugar is an issue of the industry. It buys cane expensively, it is facing management troubles and the sentiment in the industry is not good. Some sugar factories are under receivership and some investors fear the firm could also go under,” Mr Gichohi told Money.

Kenya was recently granted one year by Comesa to shield local sugar industry from cheap imports, but the safeguard expired without any meaningful headway. The Comesa safeguard had been in place for a decade to allow millers inject efficiency.

Mumias has been in the loss-making territory since 2012, keeping its revival plans in limbo. Last year, it suffered Sh1.67 billion loss. In April, the firm's chief executive, Mr Peter Kebati, was sent home on allegations of abetting import of cheap sugar.

“Mumias may have to aggressively look for foreign or local institutions whose investment strategy is focused on distressed debt and that can buy the shares from institutional investors that have no appetite for below investment grade securities,” analysts at Old Mutual said last week.

Property development firm, Home Afrika, has also left a bitter taste in investors' mouths. From a listing price of Sh12 per share in July 2013, the firm's share price rallied to Sh25 per share on its listing day. But it has since tumbled to a resounding low of Sh3.2 apiece.

“In stock markets, you expose yourself to all sorts of market perceptions. Perhaps, the market is of the view that the real estate market is not performing well, which is not true,” Home Afrika's chief executive, Mr Ng'ang'a Njoroge, said in defence of the firm.

Analysts have put to question Home Afrika's strategy in executing giant projects. Most of its ambitious property projects have remained on paper.

Mr Njoroge is nevertheless optimistic.

“It's the short-term market sentiments that have affected the stock. Things are not happening as quickly but a lot of infrastructure is being laid out in our projects,” Mr Ng'ang'a said.

In June, Mr Ng'ang'a said firm will turn to selling corporate bonds to raise capital. The firm's flagship Migaa project requires about Sh2.5 billion in the next three years to set up infrastructure. Launched in March this year, its Lake View project in Kisumu needs about Sh1 billion even as Tiwi project in Kwale requires hundreds of millions of shillings.

Such projects are long-term and may take years to complete before they start paying off. But, its first phase of the Mitini project is set to open doors for occupation a month from now according to Mr Ng'ang'a.

Battery maker Eveready, on the other hand has suffered the brunt of dumping cheap and substandard battery in Kenya. This has persistently hurt its performance and significantly eroded its share price to Sh1.9 as at the close of trading on August 1. It listed on the NSE in 2006 at Sh9.5 a share.

Expectation of weak earnings from Uchumi Supermarket has also depressed its share price by 42 per cent year-to-date. The firm's plan to raise Sh1.5 billion through a rights issue continues to hang in limbo. The supermarket's share price has in the year ending August 1, lost 37.63 per cent to settle at 12.1 per share.

Analysts say that more investors have continued to exit the poor performers and put their money in the banking and financial services

Job Ng'ang'a could hardly raise Sh25 bus fare to Nakuru, but today his investment has a stock of at least Sh500,000

BY FRANCIS MUREITHI
@FMureithi
fmureithi@ke.nationmedia.com

When Job Ng'ang'a came to Nakuru 25 years ago, his focus was rather simple — to sell candies, biscuits and groundnuts. And since he was naive in the business, quite often, council askaris held him for being on the wrong side of the law.

His business did not flourish as he hoped and soon he was hired to iron clothes for a Sh100 wage per day. He could hardly live on the meagre pay and so he started selling green vegetables at Ponda Mali open air market on the outskirts of the bustling town. Here, he met the council askaris, again, and many were the times he was arrested for failing to pay Sh200 fees.

"It was a difficulty time for me. I was shown the door by a relative whom I was living with. And for almost a year, I slept on a heap of dry leaves," he told Money.

Mr Job Ng'ang'a

But, due to his undying hope, Mr Ng'ang'a turned to second hand clothes' business. This saw him travel to Kibuye market in Kisumu and Kericho selling mitumba. But owing to the rigours involved in the trade, he closed shop but not before raising savings to buy a sewing machine which he used to pitch tent outside Shik Park View Hotel along Kenyatta Avenue, in Nakuru.

"I bought an old tailoring machine, paid Sh2,500 goodwill and started my business. I was paying a monthly rent of Sh500 to the hotel," he says.

Given that the income was low, he introduced his wife to the trade. She tailored the clothes as Mr Ng'ang'a hawked them.

Employment

Amon, the name he is popularly known by his customers, has steadily built a clothing business empire and today his Classic Boutique at the heart of Nakuru is a beehive of activity where customers scramble for the latest designer shoes, handbags, belts, and clothes.

And for a man who could not raise Sh25 bus fare to Nakuru not long ago, today his investment has a stock of at least Sh500,000.

"My joy today is that I have created employment and my six workers are my source of joy and encouragement because I would not like to see anybody go through what I underwent in life," he says as he attends to a customer who is attracted by a handbag on display.

Despite his achievement so far, he is not resting on his laurels. Already, he has opened four new shops. That's not all, he is a regular traveller to Taiwan, Beijing, Dubai, Turkey where he buys his products.

When Amon, 41, bought sweets worth Sh100 at a wholesale shop and started hawking in Nakuru over two decades ago, he didn't know that he was setting the foundation stone for a business empire worth about Sh2 million and still counting.

As his business gathers steam, banks which previously dismissed him as unworthy of credit have been wooing him relentlessly.

"I applied for a Sh300,000 loan at Equity Bank and this money has played a key role in setting up my present business premises," he said.

In retrospect, the father of twin boys and a girl has his tenacity to thank. Through his trade, he has bought a house at upmarket Kiamunyi estate and a sleek car as well.

"When you set your eyes on any business, never give up or lose hope. That is what has been driving me all along."

Taste of Kenyans

At the same time, he says, he has survived in the competitive business by mastering the taste of Kenyans whom he describes as keen on international trends in fashion.

"In this business, you may have enough money, but if you are not creative, you are likely to close shop. This is so because Kenyans who want to spend their hard-earned money don't like cheap products," he says, adding that entrepreneurial skills, and not money, are critical in driving any investment.

NSE WEEKLY

Shun CIC at the moment, buy Kenya Re for long-term

THE NSE: Last week, the bourse closed at 4,942.28 points, 0.74 per cent higher than Thursday. Despite the surge, the NSE remains subdued.

According to research analyst at Genghis Capital Evelyne Wanjiku, this has been due to a reduction of foreign participation. "Rising inflation and slow GDP growth have cut the portion of disposable income that trickles into the bourse," she says.

For instance, in June, foreign investors in KCB had slashed their stakes to 831.9 million shares from 1.43 billion shares. However, new listings "especially, on the GEMs segment where Home Afrika is listed could vibrate the market," she notes.

CIC Insurance: On Thursday last week, CIC sustained a bloody nose shedding 21.08 per cent to trade at Sh8 from Sh10.05. On Friday, it fell 4.22 per cent further to Sh7.95 per share having hit a low of Sh7.65, trading 865,000 shares. According to Ms Wanjiku, the counter is trading ex-bonus. Notably, the insurer issued a bonus of one share for every five held for the financial year ending December 2014. Similarly, it had issued Sh0.10 dividend. With the counter having hit a high of Sh12.20 in the last one year from a low of Sh4.20 per share, Ms Wanjiku reckons it is now trading at fair value.

Investax Capital boss Ndindi Nyoro says, "the price had to go down by 20 per cent in order to reflect the 20 per cent bonus issued. If you had 100,000 shares before the bonus, your share value had gone down by 20 per cent."

"Being ex-dividend, CIC counter is not a buy, investors should stay away," Mr Nyoro advises. On Monday, CIC opened at Sh8 per share.

Kenya Re: After scoring a high of Sh21 per share, Kenya Re has been rowing in stormy waters. Last week, it went below Sh18, which has been its resistance point to trade at Sh17.80 per share.

According to Ms Wanjiku, "low liquidity has over time led to the counter trading at lower multiples." Nevertheless, the firm is on a growth trajectory and long-term investors can look forward to making gains.

"With 45 per cent of its business being local, Kenya Re is set to make its Abidjan, Ivory Coast, branch a fully-fledged subsidiary with key focus on Francophone markets including Senegal, Mali, and in North Africa."

Although the counter is strong, it hardly performs as it should. "This is a stock that should be trading at around Sh30. However, such a surge in price has remained a far dream," Mr Nyoro says. "Nonetheless, it is a counter that long-term investors should consider."

WEALTH MANAGEMENT » PATRICK WAMEYO

It's perfect time to check your wealth progress

TODAY, there are arguably four-and-a-half months left to the end of the year. A better half of December will be used on non-productive engagement as Kenya transitions from work to holiday moods. August therefore is perfect month to look back at your effort, results and relationships compared against projected situations that you made in the planning phase at the end of last year. There are four months ahead during which you could still make some changes and possibly set on course action that can re-orient your finances or better still, set a desired change for your 2015 plans.

I appreciate that goal-setting and goal-oriented life is not African, and not Kenyan either. However, I have no apologies advocating the same, thanks to globalisation and other mega trends of our time that continue to change the playing ground. They have effectively made the world a place for the prepared to thrive for the period during which conditions remain conducive.

Meltdown

Under six years ago, I was in employment in a financial services company at the time when global mortgage meltdown came calling with the US as the epicenter. And in just under two weeks, financial assets values tumbled by over half. It was very worrying especially for people who had bought financial assets without a good understanding about their responses under different financial market stresses. Many people sold their valuable assets at a throw away prices fearing total loss to those who were prepared for such a rough ride with hoards of cash. Talk of wealth of transfer from the poor and middle class to the rich, and indeed you will be sport on.

One would ask and fairly so, why one person would be buying when everyone else is selling to avoid losses due to such a damaging event?

The answer to this questions lie in the unwritten law of wealth — the wealthy do the opposite of what the poor do when faced by similar circumstances. They see two different realities from same set of information. For example, Mortgage meltdown was expected. What was in the waiting was the size of the damage from the re-correction of financial assets value and so planned out people lay in the wait for a kill.

With Sh1,500 seed capital and love of art, Mwangi Muchine tapped his talent to launch a woodwork shop in 2004 that is now making handsome returns

BY GRACE GITAU

For his love of art, Mwangi Muchine chose not to continue with tertiary education. Today, a look at the wood products in his workshop shows that he did not make a wrong decision after all.

After doing his Form Four exam, Mr Muchine started drawing to make money. But he later moved into woodwork where he sharpened his skills working in different workshops.

In 2003, however, he quit employment. "I felt as if my dream was being suffocated. I wanted to move on," he told Money.

But with Sh1,500 seed capital, he knew the going would get tough. However, he used the Sh1,500 to pay rent, buy timber and the basic tools to make his first product — a shoe rack — which he sold for Sh150.

Gradually customers started coming in droves.

"I saved a lot from my contracts. A third of the money went to rent, from the balance, I would buy more equipment and save the rest," he noted.

Sh10,000

Mr Muchine's profit on a good day from his workshop in Nyeri town.

With the support of well-wishers in 2004, he bought even better equipment to establish his workshop. Since then, his investment has grown in leaps and bounds every year and now he has customers from as far as Rwanda.

On a good day, his profit amounts to Sh10,000, he said.

On visiting his workshop, one would be forgiven to believe that business is low, but according to him, he doesn't make items for mere display. All the products are by order, he notes.

"Big companies make office furniture orders and a single order can go for as high as Sh400,000."

At the moment, he has eight permanent workers and he increases the number to between 15 and 30 during the peak season.

"As I grew up, I admired the transition of timber from wood to a valuable good. I was determined to use my God given gift to create beautiful furniture designs," he says.

If employees are unhappy, anxious or stressed, they will not perform well, that's why I bring in coaches to motivate them.

"Any time employees do not have peace of mind, their productivity and performance is impaired, the bigger picture is that the employer suffers loss," he said.

The good relation with his workers, he adds, has seen his business flourish. He says that most employers fail to get the best from their workers because they do not pay attention to their workers' emotional needs. On his part, Mr Muchine enjoys sharing the dining table with his employees during breakfast as well as evening outings.

He strives to make his work recognised using every opportunity including social media platforms.

His favourite customers are women whom he says are very easy to work with. "Quite often, a man would order a chair but a woman would want a chair with very clear specifications on colour, design and size," adds the father of three boys.

Every business has its own hurdles. His main raw material, timber, from hard wood is very expensive to source and transport.

Nature dream

According to the entrepreneur, children fail to make right career choices because their parents decide for them.

He says that a child portrays what they will become in future noting it is important to tap into that and nurture the dream.

In three years, he wants to have set up a warehouse in the outskirts of Nyeri and open more workshops.

Mwangi is hopeful that the rates on loans in banks will be reduced to assist him to acquire a loan for the expansion of his workshop.

I FELT AS IF MY DREAM WAS BEING SUFFOCATED. I WANTED TO MOVE ON."

Despite high premiums, medical cover is changing for the better

In a recent TV programme, you mentioned about the apparent increase in uptake of medical insurance. But neither have premiums come down nor exclusions and limits been ameliorated. What are insurers doing concerning these issues?

— Concerned medic, Nairobi.

It is true that the uptake for medical expenses insurance has increased considerably judging by the exponential growth in premiums since 2010 in particular.

According to the Association of Kenya Insurers' industry statistics, in 2010, medical insurers wrote Sh5.89 billion premiums. The figure rose by 26.27 per cent to Sh8.90 billion in 2011, and recorded a phenomenal growth rate of 46.82 per cent in 2012 when gross written premium was Sh13.07 billion making medical cover the second largest class in the short-term insurances category. Last year's data is being compiled, but there are indications that there was further growth in this class.

Despite the growth, challenges informing the underwriting task persist. For a start, it is to be noted that this class of insurance has been posting underwriting losses in all the above mentioned years, especially in 2012 when it recorded the heaviest loss among the other classes. Insurers face various challenges that emanate from the peculiar nature of the medical field.

First, medical care costs, the world over, are always on the rise because improved technology in all areas of medicine. Expenses in research and development for better drugs as well as continued technological improvements add costs that have to be recovered by way of higher medical bills. Secondly, increase in medical care costs is associated with an aging population and rising prevalence of lifestyle diseases. Ordinarily, the onset of chronic diseases such as diabetes, hypertension and arthritis is more common at an advanced age. And, because of changing lifestyles, the onset of degenerative diseases is now being observed across nearly all ages. Insurers protect themselves by imposing loss limits and exclusions or restrictions such as waiting periods.

The third challenge relates to the technical nature of insurance that requires there to be a large number of similar risk exposure units to facilitate a feasible insurance pool. As insurance operates on the law of averages, a type of insurance would be viable only if there is large enough number of insureds for the law to apply. In this respect, the crucial challenge for the underwriter is to build critical mass as early as possible else his mathematical assumptions will be thrown off-balance. So long as the uptake of medical insurance remains low, the possibility of a high claims ratio is almost inevitable.

Moreover, all the above challenges pose a difficulty for underwriters as they seek to spread their risk through reinsurance. Without morbidity rates, reinsurance terms can be hard and this is a problem with which local medical insurance providers have to contend.

But in spite of the above challenges, insurers continue to improve their medical insurance products because of social pressure and the increased uptake. The realignment has been ongoing. For example, previously excluded life threatening diseases, such as HIV/Aids, cancer, pre-existing conditions, etc are now being covered albeit with various waiting periods. Equally, age limits have been reviewed to cater for senior citizens. Individual insurers have set their own terms and one has to shop around to get a suitable deal.

Finally, although not quite medical insurance, critical illness insurance, which pays a lumpsum on diagnosis of any of defined critical illness, is also available in our market and should be considered alongside medical and personal accident cover.
